Russia, Japan Moving More Troops Into Frontier Zone

Enemy Puts New Red Loss at 200

Tokyo Diplomats Hope for Peace as Conflict Fails to Spread.

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Thursday), August 4.—Japan and Russia moved additional troops into the disputed border area around Changkufeng Hill south of Vladivostok today.

There was no indication that either side would back down but diplomats considered it a hopeful sign that the conflict had not spread.

Air raid precautions were in force throughout Japan, Korea and Manchukuo.

The Korean governor general in Seoul ordered all lights "blacked out" in North Korea and urged inhabitants of the districts around Keiko to evacuate their homes temporarily.

Tokyo Darkened.

In Tokyo lights were ordered blacked out beginning last night, except some street lights and traffic signals.

The border line is in dispute in scores of places and the more optimistic of the diplomats believed that if either side were determined upon a general conflict new clashes would have developed.

Fighting continued around Changkufeng throughout Tuesday night and Wednesday morning but field headquarters of the Japanese Korean army in Yuki, on the northwest coast of Korea near the disputed border region, announced at 4:30 p. m. that the last Soviet attack had taken place at 10 a. m.

"Soviet infantrymen, who advanced 150 meters during the night, retreated after sunrise to a line about 1,100 meters from our positions," the Japanese commander on the spot reported.

Soviets Erect Defenses.

"The Soviet forces spent the rest of the day erecting defense positions and moving in additional men and equipment."

[The Russians threw four battalions against Changkufeng and Shachofeng this morning, but met a repulse in which they lost 200 men, a Japanese army communique, reported by the Associated Press, said. —Editor's note.]

In Tokyo a foreign office spokesman announced Soviet artillery had resumed bombardment of Japanese positions in the Changkufeng area but it was presumed this referred to yesterday morning's battle.

The Domei News Agency reported from an undisclosed place that five Soviet planes were shot down in Monday's Russian air attacks and that a sixth caught fire in midair. One Soviet pilot jumped by parachute and landed inside the Japanese lines.

Envoy to Protest Bombing.

War office dispatches reported the fighting around Changkufeng and Shachofeng Wednesday morning was extremely severe. Russian infantrymen advanced in repeated charges, but were cut down by Japanese machine gun fire.

Officials continued to believe a peaceful settlement will be arranged. Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu in Moscow was to confer today with Soviet Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov to file a new protest

Diving Horse Does It Again— Quits Job for Potomac Swim

Old Sam, Who Pulls the Grass Cutter, 'Slips' Over Sea Wall Near Memorial, Cools Off Half-Hour While Being Towed Ashore.

Old Sam, the diving horse, did his stuff again yesterday.

To all outward appearances, it was simply a case of a workhorse drawing a grass cutter slipping accidentally and tumbling over the sea wall near Lincoln Memorial and falling into the Potomac.

But listen to park police:

"Oh no, if it was Sam it was no accident," they said. "Why, that nag is becoming a notorious police character. This is the third or fourth time in the last couple of years he's pulled that stunt.

"The weather was hot, he was tired of working and the water looked mighty inviting so he took a dive, just as he's done before. And they always get him out the same way, towing him to the Virginia shore. He loves the swim."

The horse is rented by the office of National Capital Parks to pull a lawn mower. It was shortly after noon, when the sun was beating down at its worst, that Sam went overboard in three feet of water, dunking his driver, Wilton Inscoe.

The driver cut the harness, clambered onto the seawall and wigwagged a distress signal to guards on Arlington Memorial Bridge. Bridge Engineer E. C. Atkinson and Guards Carl Preston and J. W. Christerson put out in a motorboat and within an hour Sam was grounded on a sandbar on the opposite Virginia shore.

And you can burn our clothes if, after shaking himself off, he didn't give his benefactors the horse laugh.

Pickets, Police Given 'Lie' at Steel Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee heard yesterday a confused and often conflicting account of a battle between police and C. I. O. pickets outside a Republic Steel Corporation mill in Youngstown, Ohio, in the course of which the strikers were dispersed by tear gas.

Strikers were on the stand, and police were on the stand, and they contradicted each other at almost every point, until Sheriff Ralph E. Elser, of Mahoning County observed:

"Well, Senator, somebody just

Excessive humidity with a temperature under 90 caused general discomfort and one prostration here yesterday.

The heat victim was Brig. Gen. Earl M. Luce, of the Minnesota National Guard and one-time adjutant general of his State. Gen. Luce collapsed in the War Department, where he had gone to pay a call, spraining one knee. He was taken to Walter Reed Hospital, where physicians said his condition was not serious.

Humidity yesterday reached .60, with maximum temperature of 88 at 2:30 p. m. Today will be partly cloudy with little change in temperature, the forecaster said.

Federal Board Will Mediate Rail Pay Cuts

Executives and Employes Agree Following Deadlock.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Hopelessly deadlocked, representatives of management of Class 1 railroads and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen agreed today to refer consideration of a proposed 15 per cent salary cut for railroad workers to the National Mediation Board.

The decision followed a conference between the carriers' joint conference committee headed by H. A. Enochs and officials of the brotherhood, which is headed by A. F. Whitney.

Enochs' group has a conference scheduled for tomorrow with George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association.

In disclosing mediation, a step provided in the railway labor act before any strike could be called, Enochs said:

"We have asked the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen to join with us in requesting the services of the National Mediation Board. We have shown members of the brotherhood that wage rates are the highest in history, while the railroads are facing disaster."

Whitney confirmed the brotherhood had agreed to the step. "We were not convinced until today that these conferences wouldn't get us any closer together."

Dwyer Tells Court Ex-Sheriff Killed Both Doctor and Wife

By the United Press.

South Paris, Me., Aug. 3.—Paul (Buddy) Dwyer testified today that former Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll slew Mrs. James G. Littlefield as well as her doctor husband.

Carroll strangled Mrs. Littlefield early on the morning of last October 15, when she accused him of murdering her husband less than 30 hours earlier, Dwyer told the Oxford County jury that must decide whether the ousted law officer will go to prison for life.

Thus Dwyer made his bid for complete exoneration in the Littlefield murder case and a possible pardon. He pleaded guilty to the murder of the doctor last December 2 and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Though he also confessed the murder of Mrs. Littlefield at the time of his arrest, he never was tried.

Today Dwyer testified that he confessed only because Carroll had threatened to kill him, too.

Crashes Kill 4 in District In 36 Hours

Girl, 4, and Boy, 14, Die as Man, 78, Expires of Earlier Injuries.

Car Hits Victim at O and Capital Streets, Also Strikes Brother.

The violent death that hides behind automobile wheels struck hard at Washington yesterday and four persons died within 36 hours. These deaths brought the death tale the year to 57.

EDNA MARY ROBINSON.

One was a 4-year-old girl, cut down when she ran into the street. Another was a 14-year-old boy, who died from injuries he received when his toy cart was crushed by an auto.

Another victim died when a speeding car swerved into a group of persons at North Capitol and O streets, mowing down two others besides himself and injuring one of them, the dead man's brother, so badly that doctors said he would not live.

A 78-year-old man, struck by a truck July 23, died in Emergency Hospital from his injuries.

Girl Is Killed.

The latest child victim, the sixth killed by autos here since July 15, was Mary Edna Robinson, of 4205 Seventh street northeast.

The child had been to a grocery store with her father, Robert E. Robinson, and ran from behind a parked car into the way of a ton-and-half truck at Eleventh and M streets northwest. She was dead on arrival at Emergency Hospital.

Robinson, who is a proofreader at the Government Printing Office, said his arms were filled with grocery bundles and he was unable to take his daughter's hand. She darted off into the street, he said. Police listed the driver as Connie W. Tinsley, colored, 25, of 1111 Lamont street northwest. He will appear before an inquest today.

Brothers Struck.

Killed in the accident at North Capitol and O streets was George E. Slaughter, colored, whose address was given as 1630½ Tenth street northwest. He died at Emergency Hospital, where he was taken by a cab driver.

Slaughter was walking with his brother, Ira Slaughter, 41, of the 900 block of Twenty-sixth street northwest, and with a nephew, James White, 27, of Fredericksburg, Va., when a speeding auto slashed into the trio, mowing them all to the street.

While Slaughter and White were taken into the hospital by attend-

Voters to Decide Bitter Tennessee Primary Today

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 3 (AP).—Tennessee's bitter political battle of personalities rather than issues will be decided at the ballot boxes tomorrow.

Highlighting the race is that for the gubernatorial nomination, with Gov. Gordon Browning seeking indorsement for a second term, facing the determined opposition of National Committeeman E. H. Crump and his Shelby County (Memphis) organization, which for years has been all powerful in Tennessee's most populous city. Crump is backing Prentice Cooper, Shelbyville attorney, against Browning.

Junior Senator George L. Berry, seeking to succeed himself, has been accused of being a foe of the TVA. He is backed by Browning and opposed by District Attorney General A. Tom Stewart, of Winchester; Representative J. Ridley Mitchell, of the Fourth District, who succeeded Cordell Hull in the House of Representatives; Dr. John R. Neal, of Knoxville, and C. L. Powell, Hendersonville. Stewart is the candidate of Crump and Senior Senator Kenneth McKellar.

Plan to Buy TVA Power.

Jonesville, Va., Aug. 3 (AP).—Citizens of Lee County, westernmost county in Virginia, will meet here on Friday, August 12, to discuss means by which a $100,000 appropriation by the board of supervisors will be used to bring TVA power across the State line for the first time.

Maytag Plant Opens Today Under Guard

Iowa's Governor Issues Order After Union Weighs Pay Cut.

Ouster of Labor Board Modified to Avoid Federal Clash.

By the United Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 3.—Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel tonight announced that the strike-bound Maytag Washing Machine Plant at Newton would be permitted to reopen at noon tomorrow under protection of National Guardsmen, who have been enforcing martial law in Newton since July 20.

At the same time he averted a possible test of Federal versus State authority by agreeing to permit the National Labor Relations Board to resume its investigation of the Maytag controversy in the Federal Courthouse at Des Moines tomorrow.

His order to close the board hearings in the military district of Iowa shall hereafter be confined to Jasper County, home of the plant, the Governor decreed.

10 Per Cent Wage Cut.

All but 12 former employes of Maytag are eligible to return to work. The company will make a 10 per cent wage cut effective immediately.

Kraschel said that the union did not immediately accept his proposal.

It was believed that union officials would submit the proposal to a vote of its members at Newton either late tonight or before noon tomorrow.

The wage cut was ordered May 9. Union employes refused to accept it and began the strike. The employes are members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Raise Is Promised.

Kraschel said the company, in view of the 10 per cent cut, has adjustments downward and that a 5 per cent increase will be given employes January 1, 1939, if during the calendar year of 1938 the company shall have earnings equaling the amount required to discharge the dividends on its outstanding preferred stock.

In addition to the tentative promise of a 5 per cent wage increase January 1, 1939, the company agreed to grant an additional 5 per cent raise to be effective until June 30 1940, if:

"The company, during the period beginning January 1, 1938, and ending June 30, 1939, shall have realized net earnings equaling the amount of its dividend requirement upon its outstanding preferred stock for such 18 months period, plus an amount equaling 25 cents a share upon its outstanding common stock."

The 12 men who will be refused work at the plant were accused by the military commission of using violence, imprisoning foremen, assaulting individuals and generally spreading dissension.

New Dealer Enters Connecticut Race Against Lonergan

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 3 (AP).—Representative Herman P. Kopplemann, term "a thorough-going New Dealer" by his associates, entered the fight tonight for the Democratic nomination against Senator Augustine Lonergan, of Connecticut.

A third candidate is former National Committeeman Archibald McNeil, of Bridgeport, close friend of President Roosevelt.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, on July 18, said in a written statement that a speech delivered by Senator Lonergan a few minutes earlier "would seem to remove all reasonable objections to his nomination."

The Senator had declared in his speech that "I am and have been for and with President Roosevelt."

The comment by Cummings, himself a resident of Connecticut, was taken to remove any threat of a New Deal "purge" attempt aimed at Lonergan.

Hawaii Strike Report Ordered of Governor

Interior Department officials radioed Gov. Joseph B. Poindexter yesterday for a full report on labor disturbances in Hawaii.

The action resulted from published reports that Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel, had protested to Secretary Ickes against alleged police brutality in a strike of dock workers and seamen at Hilo.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, Aug. 3.—The inter-governmental committee of 27 nations which tackled the problem of political refugees at Evian, France, last month, resumed its sessions here today and chose Attorney George Rublee, of Washington, D. C., as permanent director.

The committee also heard comments on the plight of the thousands who had fled Germany and other countries, by Myron C. Taylor, American chairman of the Evian Conference, and Henri Berenger, head of the French delegation.

Rublee, now in Washington, is expected in London shortly to organize the commitee's work. He will establish headquarters in London and maintain close contact with countries expected to give asylum to refugees.

At its brief session today, the committee also named Earl Winterton, lord privy seal and chief of the British delegation, as its chairman. The United States, France, Brazil and Holland were invited to appoint four vice chairmen.

Taylor told the conference that the problem of "involuntary emigration" was one which challenged

Hines' Lawyer Wins an Order Against Dewey

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 3.—Counsel for James J. Hines, Tammany boss, accused of participating in a vast policy rackets conspiracy, obtained a court order late today putting much of the prosecution's case in jeopardy.

Upon motion of Lloyd Paul Stryker, Hines' lawyer, Justice Ferdinand Pecora directed District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey to show cause tomorrow why evidence based on the long bill of particulars he filed yesterday should not be barred.

That bill charged, among other things, that accused policy conspirators not specifically identified "intimidated, influenced or bribed" public officials, including former Tammany District Attorney William C. Dodge, City Magistrate Hulon Capshaw and the late City Magistrate Francis Erwin.

Called "Indefinite, Vague."

Stryker contended this specification was "indefinite, vague" and full of "generalities," as were others, and thus all should be thrown out, because they had not set forth the "specific facts" which the court had directed that the bill must contain.

He asserted Dewey had put forward "innuendos" instead of the flat accusations he had been directed to offer, mentioning especially the prosecutor's statement that not only Dodge, Capshaw and Erwin had been improperly approached, but that "others, the names of whom are not presently known," had been likewise involved

Dodge Denounces Dewey.

"The very purpose of the court," Stryker added, "was to require the district attorney, after these many months, to name those officials whom the defendant Hines and others were alleged to have bribed or influenced, and it was not the purpose of the court to permit the district attorney from time to time to extend that list."

Hines, he went on, "should not be attacked from ambush," adding that the function of the bill of particu-

League Plans Suit to Help Group Health

Co-operative Medical Unit Would Force Doctors to Abide by Charter.

The Washington League for Co-operative Medical Service will ask Attorney General Homer S. Cummings to take legal measures to make the District Medical Society abide by its charter, the league's secretary, A. C. Edwards, said yesterday.

His statement followed a conference between Harry L. Underwood, acting United States attorney, and a delegation representing the medical co-operative group, which included John M. Carmody, rural electrification administrator.

The league, most of whose 60 members are Federal employes, accused the District Medical Society of violating its charter by having Group Health Association physicians barred from practice in District hospitals, expelling a member who became affiliated with G. H. A., and forbidding members to consult with G. H. A. staff doctors on medical or surgical cases.

"If we could have complete assurance that the grand jury investigation of the American Medical association and the local medical society, which Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold has promised, will be launched without delay, we might defer this separate action," Edwards declared.

"However, the proposed antitrust inquiry may drag out over a long period and meantime Group Health Association would be without re-

Lone Thug Takes $500 From Store On 14th St., Flees

While hundreds of pedestrians passed outside, a lone bandit last night robbed a liquor store at 705 Fourteenth street northwest of more than $500.

Holding a clerk, Joseph Carr, at bay with a revolver, the man rifled the cash register and then escaped into the crowd. No customers were in the store.

Carr, who is 28 and lives at 5022 Seventh street northwest, said that the bandit was about 37 years old, of medium height and weight and was dressed in a dark suit and a panama hat. Until the man produced an old, nickel-plated revolver, Carr said, he believed him to be a customer.

Court Suspends 3-Yellow-Line Parking Law Pending 'Test'

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Traffic Court Judge Walter J. Casey ordered suspension yesterday of all prosecutions under the new 20-feet-from-building line parking restriction.

Pending his decision in a "test" case presented by the American Automobile Association, Judge Casey instructed the corporation counsel's office to bring no more cases into court until he rules on the law's validity.

The regulation was assailed as "unreasonable and unsound" during more than 4 hours of bitter wrangling in court. The case of Francis Divilio, who received a ticket for violating the law July 29 near his home at 2101 K street northwest, was taken under consideration by Judge Casey. His decision may force traffic authorities to either revise or repeal the regulation.

Land Seizure Arbitration Is Refused U. S. By Cardenas

Mexico Holds Agrarian Expropriations Are Internal Matter.

Agrees to Discuss Value of Property

State Department Fears Stand Is Precedent for Oil Payment.

By the United Press

Mexico City, Aug. 3.—President Cardenas tonight rejected the United States' proposal to arbitrate the agrarian land controversy, involving properties expropriated from Americans, and set a precedent for future discussions relating to the seizure of foreign-owned oil holdings.

In a note handed to American Ambassador Josephus Daniels at the foreign office by Foreign Secretary Eduardo Hay, the President agreed, however, to discuss with the United States the value of the properties affected, both Mexican and American-owned, and the manner of payment, but indicated that the time and manner of indemnification is purely a question of Mexican law.

The note was in reply to one given Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador in Washington, by Secretary of State Hull on July 21.

Important in Oil Case.

[In Washington, State Department officials withheld text of the note as received here, explaining it was a "hurried" translation which required more careful treatment before publication.

[The importance attached to the reply was manifest, inasmuch as any principles raised in the present controversy doubtless will be applied also to that raised by Mexico's expropriation of the vastly more valuable oil properties of American owners.

[Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has warned that Mexican rejection of the arbitration proposal would seriously affect the "good neighbor" relations between the two countries.

[There was some resentment, privately expressed, of Mexico's assertion that this country undoubtedly would have expropriated property without paying for it, in the social reform program of the New Deal, if the United States had not been a wealthy nation.—Editor's note.]

Reforms to Continue.

The text of the note revealed clearly President Cardenas' decision to proceed with his program of social reform, based on the aims of the Mexican revolution of 1910 which overthrew the 40-year dictatorship of Gen. Porfirio Diaz.

The note twitted the United States on its refusal some years ago to respect the El Paso, Tex., Camizal award, favorable to Mexico, and after citing the "principle of equality between nations and foreigners" in the American republics, implied that the United States sought treatment for its citizens in Mexico not accorded Mexicans themselves.

Cardenas' reply dashed the hopes of many persons who were of the opinion he might agree to "conditional arbitration" as a gesture of good will to the United States and President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy. Rejection of the arbitration proposal was not a surprise, however, inasmuch as Mexican legal advisers had insisted that the land problem must be dealt with under the constitution.

$11,000,000 at Stake.

The reply, about 3,000 words long, was interpreted as indicating the course of argument this government will adopt in future discussions concerning the March 18 oil expropriation.

The value of the properties involved in the agrarian dispute has been estimated by their owners at approximately $11,000,000. They comprise chiefly moderate-sized farms.

Clark Boosted As Candidate For President

Overwhelming Victory in Missouri Race Prompts Talk of 1940.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bennett Clark's overwhelming renomination in Tuesday's Democratic primary in Missouri prompted one of his Senatorial colleagues to declare yesterday that Clark is an outstanding possibility for President in 1940.

Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, described Clark's victory as a "great tribute to his independence of thought and action," and said it "put him in a position for important consideration for the Democratic Presidential nomination" two years hence.

Clark, with the backing of the two major Democratic factions in Missouri, snowed under two opponents, both of whom swore 100 per cent allegiance to President Roosevelt. Clark has opposed some Administration policies.

Pendergast Defeated.

Strife-torn Missouri Democrats sought party peace and harmony, meanwhile, after out-State Missourians had joined St. Louis and Gov. Lloyd C. Stark in giving "Boss" T. J. Pendergast one of the soundest lickings of his long political life.

Douglas, supported by the Governor and Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann's St. Louis administration, won by 120,000 votes.

Heal Party Breach.

With November in mind, Pendergast pledged his strength to the Democratic ticket, Billings told fellow Democrats to "forget" the primary, and Chairman James P. Aylward, of the Democratic State committee, called upon the bitter factions to "submerge their differences in party loyalty."

Senator Clark, serenely at peace with all the warring groups, won Democratic renomination by a majority of more than 400,000 over three opponents. He will face his personal friend, former Gov. can nominee, in the fall election.

All 13 of the States incumbent Congressmen, 12 of them Democrats, were renominated.

Winrod Loses Race.

In Kansas the Republican Senatorial nomination went to former Gov. Clyde Reed. National Chairman John Hamilton and other Republican leaders had opposed the Rev. Gerald B. Winrod, who lost a fight for the Senatorial nomination.

"I am now confident," Hamilton said, "that in Kansas we shall elect not only a Governor and Senator, but Republicans to Congress and local offices up and down the line."

Former Gov. Reed said at Parsons, Kans., he would challenge the course of the Roosevelt Administration as a "menace to the country" that must be changed "if our form of government is to be preserved."

Democratic Gov. Walter A. Huxman was unopposed in the Kansas gubernatorial primary and State Senator Payne Ratner won the Republican nomination. Senator George McGill, a Roosevelt supporter, triumphed handily in the Democratic senatorial primary.

West Virginia Results.

Roosevelt supporters viewed as favorable to their cause the results in West Virginia, fourth State to hold primary tests Tuesday. In the only three districts with contests pro-Administration incumbents were renominated. They were Representatives Ramsay, Edmiston and Johnson.

Study of returns showed Labor's Non-Partisan League, headed by John L. Lwis, of the C. I. O., has failed so far in its efforts to purge the House of Representatives of legislators it opposes.

In primary elections to date Congressmen disapproved by the league have been uniformly successful in winning renomination. However, House members who were given the league's approval have, with a few exceptions, been renominated, also.

Some weeks ago (after several State primaries had already been held) the league made public two lists of House members, a "Class A" grouping of Congressmen whose records it approved, and a "Class D" group to whose renomination it was opposed. The latter has been called the league's "black list."

In the "Class A" were Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, who was defeated in the recent Texas primaries, and Representative McFarlane, who trailed in thet voting, but is now involved in a runoff election. Also in this group were Representative Wearin, of Iowa, and Representative Hildebrandt, of South Dakota, who lost in efforts to obtain Senate nominations.

Otherwise, those on the "Class A" list have won. They are Representatives Fries and Keller (Democrats), of Illinois; Eicher and Jacobsen (Democrats), of Iowa; Teigan, Johnson, Bernard and Buckler (Farmer-Laborites), of Minnesota; O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana; Massingale (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Bradley, Gildea, Allen and Dunn (Democrats), of Pennsylvania, and Thomas and Lyndon Johnson (Democrats), of Texas.

Martin Called Just 'McCarthy' In UAW Fight

By the United Press.

Detroit, Aug. 3.—Four suspended officers of the United Automobile Workers hurled back at President Homer Martin tonight the charges they perpetrated a Communist plot to wreck the union.

They accused Martin of an intimate, secretive alliance with Jay Lovestone, former secretary of the Communist Party. They declared that "Jay Lovestone runs the international union" and that "Martin is just a Charley McCarthy for him."

The four officers answered charges on which they are on trial before the executive board. They were revealed by Maurice Sugar, counsel for the four, Richard Frankensteen, Ed Hall, Walter Wells and Wyndham Mortimer.

Lovestone, after breaking with the Communist Party, organized the opposition and subsequently the Independent Labor League. His name has been mentioned frequently in accusations hurled back and forth since the U. A. W. factional fight broke out.

Photostatic copies of purported letters from Martin to Lovestone were produced. One of them, from Martin to Lovestone, opened with the salutation "Dear Jay" and concluded "Fraternally yours."

Housing Setup Gives 300,000 Work for Year

$800,000,000 Low-Rent Program to Provide 700 Million Man-Hours.

The Public Works Administration's construction program was further expanded yesterday while official estimates placed job-creating power of another phase of the new spending-lending program—the $800,000,000 slum-clearance, low-rent housing program of the United States Housing Authority—at 700,000,000 man-hours of labor. This equals a year's work for 300,000 men.

Harold Ickes, Public Works Administrator, announced Presidential approval of 26 additional non-Federal projects having an estimated value of $5,088,651, with PWA grants of $2,289,888. This brought the total of estimated construction value of approved non-Federal and Federal projects up to $1,086,573,581.

The USHA, analyzing the work-producing power of its $800,000,000 program, which is to provide homes for approximately 160,000 low-income families, said that nearly $700,000,000, or more than three-fourths of all the money to be invested in local low-rent housing projects, for which it lends 90 per cent, will be spent on building materials, contractors' fees and labor.

Of this amount $250,000,000 will be wages for building trades workers and will provide approximately 270,000,000 man-hours of direct labor on the project sites.

For every ten men who hammer nails and lay bricks and install bathtubs, it said, at least 15 additional men will work in mills that produce nails, the kilns where bricks are baked, and the factories where bathtubs are made.

This "behind the scene" or indirect labor will approximate 430,000,000 man-hours.

Ford Denounced By Eddie Cantor Over Nazi Medal

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 3.—Eddie Cantor, speaking at the Hotel Astor today before the National Board of Hadassah, women's Zionist organization, and the Committee of a Thousand for youth, denounced Henry Ford for accepting a medal from Chancellor Adolf Hitler, of Germany.

Ford's acceptance of the decoration had been construed in Germany, Cantor said, as evidence that "all of America is in back of naziism."

"Mr. Ford, in my opinion," said Cantor, "is a damned fool for permitting the world's greatest gangster to present him with this citation. I question Mr. Ford's Americanism and I question his Christianity. I don't think he's a real American, and I don't think he's a good Christian."

Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, wife of the Governor of New York, in a speech at the luncheon, praised Cantor for having collected $500,000 in England with which to send Jewish youths from Germany and Poland to Palestine.

Ickes' Attack Helped Smith, Virginians Say

Voters Who Favored Dodd Changed Minds After Official's Blast.

By Edward T. Folliard

Not only William E. Dodd, jr., but Secretary of Interior Ickes got a wound stripe out of Tuesday's primary election in nerby Virginia, in the view of seasoned politicians of the Old Dominion.

Ickes attack on Representative Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria, five days before the primary, not only did not hurt Smith, they said, but actually helped him.

Ickes on Thursday charged that Smith had tried to "muscle in" on credit for PWA grants to the University of Virginia. Smith replied the next night:

"The unhappy Harold Ickes has been muscling in all his life. He muscled into the Republican Party and helped to ruin that; he deserted the Republican Party and muscled into the Bull Moose Party and helped to ruin that; he deserted that party and muscled in on the Democratic Party and is trying to ruin that . . . The real Democratic Party has given him his only place in the sun during a life time of muscling in."

Voters Enjoyed Laugh.

The next day, it was learned yesterday, Smith campaign workers began to report that voters in many parts of the Eighth District—voters who previously had planned to vote for Dodd or not vote at all—had enjoyed a good laugh and decided to vote for Smith, after all.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch, sensing this reaction, reported just before the primary:

"Candid students of the Virginia political psychology contend that there is something in the temper of Virginians that incline most of them to rebel against outside interference in their affairs.

It would not be fair to say that Ickes gave Dodd a political kiss of death. Dodd was doomed to defeat with or without Ickes' intervention. In fact, one of Dodd's closest associates, a keen political mind, had predicted that the final tally would be Smith, 19,000; Dodd, 8,000. That was close with respect to Smith, and only a little off on Dodd. Actually the tally was Smith, 19,374; Dodd, 6,555.

"Red" Charge Hurt Dodd.

Dodd lost both free cities—Alexandria and Charlottesville—and every one of the 15 counties. Out of the 219 precincts, Dodd carried only two—Swetnam, in Fairfax County, and Occoquan in Prince William County. The District of Columbia workhouse is located at Occoquan, and has been the beneficiary of PWA projects.

What hurt Dodd most, his friends believed, was the newspapers and circulars that were distributed from door to door and which sought to make him out a Communist.

Representative Smith was the second member of Congress Secretary Ickes singled out for criticism this summer. On July 25 Ickes listed Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, as one of those who were trying to "muscle in" on President Roosevelt and the New Deal. Tydings now is engaged in a hot fight for renomination with Representative David A. Lewis, an ardent New Dealer.

The victory of Representative Smith Tuesday, together with that of Colgate W. Darden, of Norfolk, strengthened the poljtical machine of Senator Harry F. Byrd, and forecast a conservative Byrd-for-President delegation to the Democratic national convention of 1940.

Darden lost his seat in the House two years ago to Representative Norman R. Hamilton, of Portsmouth, who ran as a New Dealer. He won it back Tuesday, despite Hamilton's warning that he was a member of the Byrd machine and might be unfriendly to President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, read the Virginia returns yesterday morning and announced that the New Deal had "suffered a crushing and humiliating defeat in Virginia." He continued:

"Not only did the voters of one Virginia Congressional district overwhelmingly renominate, against all the forces and influence of the Roosevelt Administration, the Democratic incumbent who had dared to criticize the New Deal, but the voters in another Congressional district retired to private life an ardent New Dealer, naming in his place a man who took a firm stand against the follies and extravagances of the New Deal.

"There can be no doubt that the issue of New Deal versus anti-New Deal was clearly drawn in the race between Representative Smith and Mr. Dodd. Not only was Mr. Dodd urged to run as a New Deal candidate by the White House, but his manager was a New Deal jobholder, Secretary of Interior Ickes publicly indorsed him and savagely assailed Mr. Smith, and all New Deal jobholders living in that part of Virginia enthusiastically campaigned for Mr. Dodd. Yet he was ignominously beaten by a vote of better than 3 to 1, not even carrying a single county in the district.

Sees New Deal Rout.

"This crushing defeat of the White House's candidate, coming on the heels of the defeat of Maury Maverick in Texas, again indicates the grass roots swing away from Roosevelt and the New Deal that is taking place throughout the country. What started out to be a New Deal purge is becoming a New Deal rout that will reach its climax in November."

Virginia Democrats viewed it otherwise. The results, they contended, showed that Virginians were what President Roosevelt has called "Yes, but" people; they still like Roosevelt, but they want their representative in Congress to use some independent judgment on his program.

Gov. James H. Price, of Virginia, denying Hamilton's view, said the two elections were without "special political significance." The Governor, who is favorable to the Roosevelt Administration, said the issues were largely "local" and the outcome "could not be interpreted as indicating either a State or national trend.

Barkley Admits He Is 'Yes Man'

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 3 (AP).—President Roosevelt's name is back in the forefront of Kentucky's sizzling Senatorial primary today.

New Deal Leader Senator Alben W. Barkley, given the personal political blessing of Roosevelt, is telling his audiences:

"Mr. Chandler (Gov. A. B. Chandler, his opponent) says I have been a 'yes man' to the President. Well, I must plead guilty to this charge. Maybe the Governor won't like it, but I take some pride in knowing I have been loyal and faithful to the President."

The Governor, who drew some praise from the President on his conduct of State affairs, replies:

"I will support President Roosevelt in anything he undertakes to do for the people of Kentucky . . . and anything he doesn't do for Kentucky I ain't going to be for anyway—I'm going to be for you."

Gov. Chandler Gains Against 'That Barkley'

Cross-Roads Campaign Is Believed Improving His Chances.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Louisville, Aug. 3.—Senator Alben W. Barkley, wearing the Roosevelt colors in the Senatorial race, was being hard pressed tonight by Gov. A. B. Chandler, whose supporters are counting heavily on his inimitable cross-roads style of campaigning.

To the Governor, his opponent is "That fellow Barkley."

"Let me tell you about that fellow Barkley," and then the Governor, with appropriate mimicry, would tell his audiences about the "Roosevelt" incident. The President, according to the Governor, did not really want to butt into the Kentucky campaign at all.

"Barkley got scared and sent a hurry call to Washington, 'Come down and help me out. Happy's got me,' the Governor explained. "So what could the President do? Why, he just had to come down because he owed so much to Barkley, who jumped one-and-a-half every time the President told him to jump once.

"But when he got down here he didn't make the kind of speech Barkley wanted him to make at all. He said Barkley ought to go back to the Senate because he was the senio, Senator, but he said I was a good Governor and he called me his friend.

"Now, folks, do you know what that meant, what the President was really saying to Barkley? Why, he was saying, 'Here, Barkley, get off my coattails. You're too much of a load. Get along and do your own campaigning.'

"And ever since then the President has been out of this campaign and Barkley has been going it alone, and look where he is! He is like a ball in tall weeds."

Rebellion Seen Against New Deal

Chicago, Aug. 3 (AP).—Chairman Glenn Frank of the Republican program committee today professed to see indications of a "healthy American rebellion" in the defeat of several New Deal supporters in primary elections.

"The instances in which the Roosevelt purge have been stopped indicate a healthy American rebellion against the Administration's persistent attempt to establish the European doctrine of 'the leader' here under the polite name of party discipline," he stated.

"The Americanized version of 'the leader' doctrine is simply the old American institution of the boss expanded to national scale and given a halo of idealism."

Lundeberg's Seamen Seeking A. F. L. Charter

Harry Lundeberg, president of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, is negotiating for an American Federation of Labor charter for his organization, officials said yesterday, but it has not yet been granted. The West Coast Union voted recently to affiliate with the federation.

Aide of Roper Hails Decrease In Inventories

Patterson Terms Decline a Major Reason for Better Trade.

A decrease in consumer goods inventories was a major factor in the improvement of retail conditions in June, according to a midyear summary of retail trade issued yesterday by Richard C. Patterson, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

The department's statistics reveals that the large quantity of merchandise which was accumulated in the latter part of 1936 and early 1937, owing to inflationary psychology, has been gradually liquidated. For some kinds of business stock levels are back again to normal.

Inventories of heavy consumer goods, however, were the most difficult to move, "but by a cautious system of scaling production to demand and more concentrated promotional methods," it is stated, "dealers' stocks of heavy merchandise are not high for midsummer, and signs point to potential sales improvement during the second half of this year.

12 Percent Below Last Year.

"The cost or value of goods on hand from a sample group of stocks in the general merchandise field indicates that inventories on July 1 were approximately 12 per cent below July, 1937, and that the relation of stocks to sales is about normal for the present rate of consumer purchasing. On the first of January, 1938, stocks were about 4 per cent higher than at the beginning of 1937.

"Not since the late summer of 1936 has the dollar value of department store stocks been so low as was shown at the end of the second quarter of this year. As measured by the seasonally adjusted index of the Federal Reserve System, goods on hand July 1 receded to 67 per cent of the 1923-25 monthly average from 76 per cent for July, 1937.

"Midyear inventories for 1938 of Variety chain stores show a reduction in cost value of about 6 per cent from July a year ago, with stock sales ratios being somewhat higher than last year."

Retail Sales Down.

Analyzing sales and inventories as of the midyear the Department of Commerce states:

"Retail sales during the first six months of 1938 were about 15 per cent below the corresponding period of 1937 and about 5 per cent below 1936 according to final midyear estimates of the marketing research division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

"Sales of general merchandise decreased about 8 per cent, food sales were down about 5 per cent, and heavy durable goods about 36 per cent. The greatest relative decline in this latter group was recorded for automobiles, a drop of almost 50 per cent taking place in the dollar volume of new passenger cars during the six months period as compared with 1937. Sharp reductions were shown for furniture and household appliances, and for lumber and bulding materials but the relative declines were considerably less than that recorded for automobiles . . . the decrease in dollar sales of general merchandise and food was not entirely due to depressed conditions but can be accounted for in part by lowered prices."

Infantile Paralysis Declines in Nation, Health Body Says

Infantile paralysis, which was epidemic in 1937, is claiming an unusually small number of victims this year, the U. S. Public Health Service reported yesterday.

During the week ended last Saturday, a total of 59 cases was reported, compared to 401 for the corresponding week in 1937. For the last week in July, the figure was the lowest in more than ten years. The median for this seven-day period is 117 cases.

A case of infantile paralysis, or poliomyelitis, was reported to the District Health Department yesterday and there was another the day before but Dr. C. C. Dauer, epidemiologist, said there was no cause for alarm.

Yesterday's case, that of a 3 year-old child, was the fourth in the District this year. There was one in July, a 6-year-old colored nonresident, and another last February, a 16-year-old youth. The case reported last Tuesday also was that of a youth 16.

Public Health Service officials declined to speculate on the reasons for the unprecedented drop. One of them, however, was certain that the increasing use of alum and zinc sulphate nasal sprays as a prophylaxis is not responsible.

"Sprays seem to be effective on experimental animals but not on human beings," he asserted.

Eddie, 7, Doesn't Know It's Hot, For He's Learned a New Curve

Playgrounds' Youngest Pitcher 'Just Throws 'Em' Now, But He's Dreaming of Being Another Hubbell or Gomez—and So's His Dad.

Eddie Mason, at 7, looks forward to a career as a big leaguer some day when box scores of the current baseball season have become yellowed clippings of yesteryear in newspaper morgues.

For Eddie, who lives with his parents at 1939 Fourth street northeast, is the youngest pitcher on the playgrounds—and he spends his mornings and afternoons on the athletic field of Langley Junior High School tossing 'em over for the bigger boys.

Some day Eddie dreams of being famous, like Johnny Vander Meer, or Carl Hubbell, or Lefty Gomez, or any of the noted pitchers of today. He's got a long way to go, but he also has a lot of speed—even if it is a soft ball he pitches during his first season as a twirler.

"I just throw 'em," Eddie confided yesterday. "I just throw 'em over—but I'm learning fast."

Playground coaches admit Eddie, who is in the second grade at Emery School, has a lot of speed. Maybe Walter Johnson wasn't any speedier than Eddie when he was a youngster at 7, in an era before playgrounds were so well developed.

Eddie's staunchest rooter is his dad, Charles Mason—a postal worker, who is on vacation just now, supervising Eddie's "smoke" and "control."

"Eddie's never seen a big league game, but I'm going to take him out as soon as Washington gets back in town," said Mason yesterday.

"He just sort of took to baseball naturally. Everywhere I go in the neighborhood, people tell me they've seen Eddie around practicing. I keep him close to the playground. I don't want him to develop too fast—for he's just a little fellow, with a long time to play."

Eddie breezed them over yesterday afternoon. He didn't mind the heat. He'd learned a new curve. It wasn't necessary for the catcher to say:

"Put her to me, kid."

Girder Collapses 4-Story Scaffold; 3 Escape Death

Three workmen narrowly escaped death yesterday in Hyattsville, Md., when scaffolding on which they stood collapsed beneath the weight of a huge steel girder.

The men were James I. McGill, 31 124 C street northwest; Alonzo Zimmerman, 54, 224 Indiana avenue northwest, and Rene Sandeau, 32, of Essex, Md. All were working on the fourth-floor steel superstructure of the new Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission at Oakwood road and Columbus avenue.

According to Contractor C. W. Freitag, the trio attempted to lift to their shoulders a 1,000-pound girder. The weight caused the scaffolding to break. Zimmerman clung to the beam and escaped injury. McGill strucka girder on the floor below and was knocked semi-conscious.

He was saved from falling to the ground by W. T. Harris, colored, of Washington, who stood on the third-floor girder and caught McGill as he fell. Sandeau succeeded in clutching at the same girder and helped Harris hold McGill until other workers came to their rescue.

Taken to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad, McGill was found to be suffering from a possible fractured pelvis and Sandeau from possible fracture of several ribs.

Cab Owners Flay 1,000 Limit Order

Independent Taxi Owners' Association, which controls the Diamond Cab Co., yesterday sought an injunction in District Court restraining the Public Utilities Commission from limiting to 1,000 the number of cabs any association may operate in the District.

The association claimed the order, intended by the commission to prevent a monopoly, was beyond the authority of the commission and hence void. It also charged the order will not promote public safety nor improve traffic conditions, imposes an illegal financial loss on the company and is tantamount to taking its property without due process of aw.

Woman's Poison Death Is Described as Suicide

Mrs. Nellie Thomas Warren, 40, of the 3300 block of Stuyvesant street, died late yesterday in Gallinger Hospital from the effects of poison taken at her home Tuesday.

She was found unconscious by her brother, Albert M. Dickson, and rushed to the hospital. Dickson said his sister had been in ill health. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

D.C. Grand Jury Indicts 4 for 15 Auto Thefts

Took Cars Stolen Here to Richmond and Changed Motors, Police Say.

Four men alleged to have stolen 15 automobiles from Washingtonians were indicted on grand larceny charges by the District grand jury yesterday. They were Floyd Talley, H. E. West, Palmer J. Wellhouse and John J. Kendig.

According to Assistant United States Attorney George McNeil, the indicted men would take motors out of wrecked cars and place them in stolen vehicles.

Detective Sergeant Jacob Wolf and S. W. Fairchild, a private investigator, worked up the case against the four men, whose operations centered mainly about Richmond. Secret engine numbers enabled the investigators to identify the cars even though they had been camouflaged.

Others indicted and the charges against them were:

Clevous Duncan, assault with a dangerous weapon; Charles W. Ritter and Raymond Washington, assault with intent to commit rape; Clarence Ashe, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934; Chester A. Osborn and John J. Hannon, violation of the Harrison narcotic act; Elizabeth Butler, Ellsworth E. Pierce and William S. Ward, violation of section 73, title 18, U. S. code.

Second Sting of Bee Is Fatal to Gardener

Irvington, N. Y., Aug. 3 (U.P.).—A bee stung Svend Hansen, a gardener, last year. He was revived after being unconscious for several hours. Today Hansen collapsed and died after working in his garden. Dr. Amos O. Squire, Westchester County medical examiner, said his death was due to poison from the sting of a bee.

Russo-Japanese 'Armed Truce' Forecast Here

Neither Desires General War Over Border, Observers Feel.

By the Associated Press.

Men to whom the Administration looks for guidance in foreign affairs yesterday clung to the conviction that the latest Russo-Japanese fighting was likely to conclude in an armed truce.

Regardless of pitched battles along the Manchukuo-Korea-Siberia border, well-informed persons still are inclined to view the clash as a local affair destined to be settled locally.

Neither Japan, embroiled with China, nor Russia, concerned over European threats and internal problems, desires a general war at this time, in the view of several diplomatic and military experts here.

All observers, however, are ready to revise their judgment quickly if the boundary fighting shows signs of getting completely beyond control.

Study Made Months Ago.

Official State, War and Navy Department comment has been limited to Secretary Hull's statement Tuesday that the Government was observing with special interest the varying reports from Tokyo and Moscow.

Privately it was disclosed that months ago a detailed study of official reports from abroad had led to the conclusion, still held, that neither side wanted a conflict of the proportions of the 1904 Russo-Japanese War.

One official adviser, map in hand, noted that Changkufeng Hill, scene of fighting this week, was situated in territory that was in dispute before Japan occupied Manchuria in 1931.

Hill Dominates Railroad.

Only about 100 miles southwest of Vladivostok, Soviet Far Eastern metropolis, it overlooks and dominates the railroad serving the port of Rashin, which Japan has developed recently in Korea.

Both the Russian Siberian force and Japan's Manchurian-Korean forces are semiautonomous, able to carry on undeclared warfare without involving their respective governments irretrievably.

The boundary fighting, experts noted, tends to hold along the border a great Japanese force which otherwise might prove decisive in the Sino-Japanese conflict.

They said a general war would mean probably a Japanese attempt to pinch off the Russian Far Eastern provinces at Lake Baikal, a Japanese naval blockade of Vladivostok, and immediate Russian air raids on Japan's cities.

have operated in some instances to restrain and in other instances to stimulate artificially the flow of goods, similar forces have acted in some instances to bar, and in other instances to force artificially the flow of people. The consequence has been that thousands upon thousands of human beings have been uprooted from the homes where they have long been established, and set adrift to wander without hope."

M. Berenger declared in part: "So long as human beings are torn from their homes and thrown beyond frontiers after having been robbed of their property on account of the simple grievance of an arbitrary difference of race, based upon a so-called difference of equality of blood, disorder will only be accentuated in Europe and the world.

"The government which expels should leave to the expelled their properties, which are, up to the present, their only means of livelihood, and the governments who receive should accord to those they receive, the means of working, so that they may live in the new career which may be opened to them.

"We must act quickly, for the suicides are increasing, ruin is accumulating."

Tired of No Work and All Pay

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The Hollywood pay was good but what Ariane Borg wanted was a chance to play in pictures, she said yesterday at New York as she prepared to sail to her home in France. She said that in two years and three months she was under contract she had no opportunity to act, although her salary was raised from $300 to $500 a week with expenses paid.

against the latest Russian aerial bombings in Korea, where the town of Kojo was badly damaged and a number of civilians were killed, and to sound out the Soviet minister on Japan's previous offer for a settlement of the border dispute by negotiation.

It was understood the ambassador was instructed to protest specifically against 10 Soviet aerial bombing attacks in Korea and Manchukuo Monday and Tuesday. He was informed that 60 Soviet planes participated in the bombing of Kojo.

In connection with this attack the war office said that at least two Soviet planes were shot down and their crews killed. They fell in Japanese territory.

Russians Aroused.

Moscow, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—War fervor spread across Russia tonight, creating demands from millions of workers for "decisive punishment" of the Japanese, as the government gravely announced further battles along the Manchukuo-Siberia frontier appear inevitable.

China Moving Troops.

Tientsin, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Japanese newspapers reported today Gen. Sheng Shih-Tsai, Chinese governor of Sinkiang, is marching with his army toward Outer Mongolia to join Russian forces massed there for a possible invasion of the Japanese-controlled areas of North China.

Mexico Increases Tax 12 Per Cent on Exports

Mexico City, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Senate passed a bill today imposing a 12 per cent horizontal increase in export duties. The measure already had been approved by the Chamber of Deputies.

Nazis to Repay French Austrian Loan Losses

Paris, Aug. 3 (AP).—Germany and France have reached an accord, it was announced today, in which Germany agrees to reimburse the French government for any costs incurred from its guarantee of Austrian loans.

British Adviser Asks 'Patience' In Czech Affair

Runciman Councils Slow Negotiations With Sudeten Nazis.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Aug. 3.—Viscount Runciman, Great Britain's unofficial adviser and mediator, tonight counseled patience in attempts to reconcile differences between the Czechoslovak government and the nation's 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans.

In a brief address to 200 newspapermen he indicated his friendly, private attempt to prevent an explosion in Czechoslovakia—an effort which had the unofficial sympathy of the British government—would not be a hurry-up job of statesmanship.

"Much can be said in these circumstances for the exercise of patience as well as insight," he declared in the address made shortly after his arrival from London.

This patience, he continued, would be exercised at every step in gaining the mutual consent of the Prague government and the autonomy-demanding Sudeten Germans.

Asserting he was here because he was given an explicit understanding by both the Prague government and the Sudeten Germans that he was welcome, Lord Runciman added:

"I want to make it clear at the outset that I didn't ask for this job."

Hope Gone for Clipper.

Manila, Aug. 3 (AP).—Chances of finding the Hawaii Clipper and the 15 men she carried when she vanished last Friday appeared hopeless to most observers today as a fleet of 13 naval ships completed the fifth day of fruitless search.

FoesBothClaim Aerial Victory Near Hankow

Chinese Admit Hwangwei's Fall, Declare Floods Hamper Enemy.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Aug. 4.—Chinese and Japanese claimed victory today in a large-scale air battle near Hankow, provisional Chinese capital and target of the Japanese drive up the Yangtze River.

Japanese asserted that aJpanese air fleet engaged 54 Chinese planes, shot down 32 and destroyed seven more in a bombing raid yesterday on Hankow which ended with only two Japanese craft missing.

Chinese declared they lost ony six planes and brought down 12 Japanese raiders, including one bomber.

Japanase ground forces were admitted by Chinese to have entered Hwangwei, slightly more than 100 air miles east of Hankow, but Chinese said the invaders were "under water." The city was said to have been flooded by rising Yangtze River waters which poured through broken dikes.

Deny Cutting Dikes.

"The warfare prevented repair of the broken embankments," Chinese said, in apparent denial of Japanese charges the dikes were being cut deliberately to halt the Japanese advance.

Japanese striking at Nanchang, Chinese air base, 90 miles south of the conquered Yangtze port of Kiukiang, were said to have overcome Chinese resistance to reach a point within 50 miles of their objective.

Official Japanese reports of the Hankow air battle said "All efforts of China to rebuild her air force have been pulverized by Japanese attacks." Japanese said they virtually had destroyed a Chinese air fleet of American, British and Russian planes.

Rail Approaches Bombed.

Hankow dispatches reported the battle was fought some miles away from that city. After the air fight, 18 Japanese heavy bombers, accompanied by 10 pursuit planes, appeared over Hankow and bombed railroad approaches and factories in the northern section.

Several bombs struck defense positions along a massive dike protecting the city from near flood level waters of the Han River which flows into the Yangtze at Hankow. Casualties were said to have been small.

Nazi Propagandist Handed Subpena, Cancels Voyage

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—George Sylvester Viereck, a publicist subpenaed today by the House Committee investigating un-American activities, canceled his booking on the liner Hansa tonight half an hour before his scheduled sailing.

Previously, he had said he would sail despite the subpena, served by direction of Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, the committee chairman.

"We have been informed that Mr. Viereck had arranged a private meeting with Chancellor Hitler in his mountain retreat," said Dies.

Viereck testified in 1934 that Dr. Otto Klep, former German consul general here, paid him $2,000 for publicity favorable to Germany.

The subpena calls for his appearance before the Dies committee August 18. If any witness fails to comply with a House subpera, Dies said, "we will show them that the law has teeth in it."

Hirohito Gives Up Gold To Help Finance War

Tokyo, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Emperor Hirohito today delivered 70 golden vessels from the imperial treasures to the custody of the ministry of finance as his contributoin in the campaign to increase Japan's gold reserves in financing her war in China.

Mexico Rejects U. S. Request For Land Seizure Arbitration

Mexico

The seizures have been effected over a 10-year period, beginning in 1927. The expropriations often have been referred to the United States-Mexican general claims commission but no claims have ever been paid in their behalf.

The note reiterated President Cardenas' doctrine of handling agrarian and, presumably, petroleum questions as purely internal affairs.

It declared the New Deal's reform program undoubtedly would have expropriated things without paying for them if the United States had not been a wealthy nation.

The note contended the Mexican government "maintains that no principle, universally accepted in theory or realized in practice, is found in international law which makes obligatory payment of immediate compensation, nor even deferred compensation, of expropriations of a general impersonal character, such as those Mexico carried out in effecting redistribution of land."

It added that "agrarian reform is not only one aspect of the program for social betterment . . . but it is also the most important fulfilment of the demands of the Mexican people, who sacrificed the very lives of their sons in a revolution in order to achieve this end."

Referring to Hull's statement in his note that the United States "has been very actively pursuing a program of social betterment," the Mexican reply said "enumeration by your government of social reforms realized recently in the United States represents the extent of present day demands for fundamental readjustment in methods of government, for a few years ago such reforms would not have been approved nor even perhaps tolerated.

"If your government has been in a position to pay compensation forthwith this merely indicates that its economic situation permitted it, but it certainly could not have postponed or abandoned these reforms even had its economic situation not been good."

Mexico, the note continued, "admits in obedience to her own laws that she is bound to make adequate indemnification, but the doctrine Mexico maintains in the premises and upheld by the most authoritative opinions of writers on international law is that the time and manner of such payment should be determined by her own laws."

The note pointed out that when Mexico "decided to suspend payment on its agrarian debt in 1930, the measure affected equally Mexicans and foreigners. If Mexico had paid the former, she would without doubt have violated the rule of equity; if she paid only the latter, she would have committed a similar irregularity."

Cites Other Nations.

"The republics of our continent have let their voices be heard since the first Pan American Conference, vigorously maintaining the principle of equality between nationals and foreigners, considering that a foreigner who voluntarily moves to a country not his own in search of personal benefit admits in advance the advantages he is going to enjoy and the risks to which he may find himself exposed.

"The demand for unequal treatment is implicitly understood in your Government's note."

In a thinly veiled reference to the United States' failure to obey an international arbitration award in favor of Mexico in the dispute over the Chamizal section of El Paso, Tex., the note said:

"Mexico never refused to submit her international differences to jurisdiction of a court, nor has she objected to a decision which has been unfavorable to her.

"Notwithstanding this, she considers that arbitration should be reserved, as the Washington Treaty itself provides, for cases of irreconcilable differences. That is not so in the present case . . . since the Mexican government never denied its obligation to pay indemnity.

No Subject for Arbitration.

"No subject exists, therefore, for the arbitration proposed."

The treaty referred to was the Inter-American Treaty of Arbitration of 1929, whose provisions Hull cited in proposing arbitration.

"Arbitration is unnecessary," the note continued, "and would, moreover, be unlawful under the terms of the Washington Treaty since procedures of execution for compliance with obligations already recognized by Mexico cannot be the subject of arbitration and must be determined according to her economic conditions, which cannot fail to be taken into account by a friendly nation, nor can they be the object of decision by an international court, which in seeking to impose a given economic organization upon Mexico, would mortally wound her right to organize herself autonomously, the very foundation of her sovereignity.

"In view, thereof, I permit myself to invite the Government to Your Excellency to name a representative who, together with a representative designated by my government, will fix the value of the properties affected and the manner of payment . . . to both Mexican nationals and foreigners.

"The Government of Mexico is ready to begin immediately discussions of the terms of this agreement."

State Department officials last night explained that the Chamizal case referred to in the Mexican note concerned a boundary dispute caused by a shift in the Rio Grande's course.

A shift in the river at El Paso, Tex., caused approximately 600 acres of land previously on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande to become part of the territory on the American side. Subsequently buildings were erected on the land, which had been taken over by El Paso.

Mexico sought a settlement and the case was referred to an international commission, composed of one American, one Canadian and one Mexican representative. A majority decision favorable to Mexico was rendered in 1910, but it was rejected by the United States.

Roosevelt's Ship Due in Canal Zone

Aboard U. S. S. Houston, Aug. 3 (AP).—The cruiser Houston, carrying President Roosevelt, headed toward Balboa, Canal Zone, tonight from Cocos Island, 540 miles west of Panama. She is scheduled to arrive tomorrow afternoon.

The President there will give a reception aboard the vessel in honor of President Arosemena of Panama, former President Arias, American Minister Corrigan, Clarence Ridley, Governor of the Panama Canal; Maj. Gen. David Stone, commanding the Canal Zone Army forces; Rear Admiral Walter N. Vernou, naval commandant of the zone; Rear Admiral Yancey Williams, commanding the special service squadron, and various others.

ants, a woman companion of the motorist went into the emergency room, asking treatment for cuts. A minute later she leaped from the operating table and, before she could be stopped, rushed to the car outside.

The driver whirled down the hospital driveway, striking a parked car a glancing blow. Then he caromed across the lot in front of the institution and roared down Fifth street. At V street his speeding machine crashed into another parked car.

The man and woman then abandoned their crashed machine and fled on foot.

The other child to die in the 36-hour period was Winslow Minor, 14, of 1822 D street northwest. He died in Emergency Hospital Tuesday night a short time after he had been struck by a truck while riding his soapbox scooter. The same night, John Linder, 78, of 304 Fourth street southeast, died from injuries he received when struck by an auto July 23.

Inquests on both deaths have been set for today.

Three persons were injured in other traffic accidents during the day. In one, Andrew T. Roland, 28, of 2632 Garfield street northwest, suffered fractured ribs and collarbone. His car collided with another machine, driven by Roland A. Stolz, 22, of 742 Crittenden street northwest. The accident occurred at Ninth and Ingraham streets northwest.

Streetcar Hits Woman.

Struck by a street car at Seventh street and Rhode Island avenue northwest, Mrs. Dolly Meyers, 57, of 1219 Franklin street northeast, was taken to Garfield Hospital. She was reported suffering from bruises and shock.

A 16-year-old girl suffered a fractured shoulder and a cut scalp when she fell from the running board of a car in Soldier's Home Park. The girl, Mary Golkoski, of 24 Todd place northeast. The car was operated by William Pierce, 20 of 4023 Illinois avenue northwest.

As a contention was arising yesterday over the reopening of every available playground in Washington to attract children from the streets and allay the death toll, the Keystone Automobile Club demanded that "all available off-street play spaces be opened—supervised or unsupervised."

School authorities have said they will reopen wherever the WPA provides a sufficient number of supervisors. The supervisors were present early yesterday at the Truesdale School, 5221 Ninth street northwest; the Oyster School, 2709 Calvert street northwest, and at Edwin L. Stanton School, Anacostia.

These schools are in ready access to parks and woodland that offer natural play areas. Lewis R. Barrett, co-ordinator of recreation, explained that the reopening would proceed in the more congested sections of the city. Simultaneously, Mrs. Mary Steele, women's director of the WPA, said the play spaces at Garnett-Paterson and Langston-Slater Schools would be opened today under supervisors.

Only 13 on Playground.

The reopened spaces yesterday failed to attract many children. In the early afternoon, only 13 were at the Stanton playground and the supervisors had little to oversee at Oyster.

"The opening of a handfull of school grounds with hastily recruited supervisory personnel is begging the clear-cut issue," the Keystone statement asserted. "Keystone recognizes the value of supervised play. But the club also recognizes—as the school authorities apparently are unwilling to do—that it is better for the child to play in an off-street play space, unsupervised, than on the street, also unsupervised. Keystone is convinced that broken windows are far better than broken bodies—and that Washingtonians feel the same way about it."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Steele said that her office is interviewing play supervisors and hopes, by the end of the week, to assign 50 or slightly more. The plan is to assign a senior recreation director, a recreation director and two recreation leaders to each reopened play area. In all, 13 playgrounds are scheduled for reopening this week.

While three playgrounds were reopened yesterday with trained WPA supervisors in charge of activities and two others were scheduled for reopening today, the Keystone Automobile Club "demanded" that "all available off-street play spaces be opened—supervised or unsupervised."

School authorities have said they will reopen wherever the WPA provides a sufficient number of supervisors.

As a contention was arising yesterday over the reopening of every available playground, two cars crashed at Ninth and Ingraham street northwest, to leave one car piled against a tree abutting the sidewalk and to send Andrew T. Roland, 28, of 2632 Garfield street northwest, to Casualty Hospital with fractured ribs and collarbone.

Inquests will be held today into the traffic deaths of Winslow Minor Cole, 14, colored of 1822 D street northwest, and John Linder, 78, of 304 Fourth street southeast

Domestic Service Best Opening for Youth, NYA Says

Director Aubrey Williams of the National Youth Administration last night made public a survey indicating that there are more job openings for unemployed young people in the restaurant and housework fields than in other types of work.

Of 114,229 youths placed in private jobs by the NYA's placement and guidance division between March 1936, and June 1938, approximately 27 per cent were hired in the two fields, the survey showed.

Retail selling and allied jobs gave employment to 23 per cent. Fifteen per cent were employed as agricultural construction and factory laborers. Ten per cent obtained other types of factory jobs; 10 per cent errand jobs, 9 per cent clerical, 4 per cent skilled trade apprenticeships and 2 per cent professional and semi-professional positions.

Capt. C.C.Calhoun, Lawyer, Is Buried

Funeral services for Capt. C. C. Calhoun, Washington lawyer and long a resident here, were held at Hines undertaking establishment last night. The services were conducted by members of the Rose Croix cast of the Scottish Rite.

Capt. Calhoun died of a heart attack Tuesday. He was 74 years old. He had recently been a special assistant to the Attorney General.

Honorary pallbearers at the funeral included James Sharp, Charles A. Calhoun, Earle Calhoun, Walker G. Moyle, William Temple, Julius C. Martin and Francis L. Neubeck. On the Rose Croix cast, which conducted the services, were Robert B. Bennett, the Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer and Frank Koch.

Capt. Calhoun's body will be taken today to his home at Owensboro, Ky., for burial.

lars was to "prevent surprise and to enable the defendant to prepare for trial."

Meanwhile, Dodge angrily denounced Dewey today as a character assassin motivated by "political aspirations." He denied "most emphatically" any improper act in his 20 years of public office.

"The outrageous and malicious assault upon my character is unjustified," said Dodge.

"I most emphatically, and in no uncertin terms, deny that I have ever been influenced, intimidated or bribed by any of the defendants mentioned in the indictment or by anybody else.

Cites His Record.

"During my administration as district attorney more than 70,000 prosecutions were conducted by my office. My records for convictions was the greatest of any district attorney beginning with William Travers Jerome, excepting former Gov. Whitman."

"Concerning policy gambling the record shows that I revised the form of complaint used in the courts in order that a greater number of those guilty would be convicted."

Magistrate Capshaw, socially prominent, already had entered a vigorous denial of the Dewey accusations.

The trial of Hines, who for a time at least, was an influential political lieutenant of James A. Farley in Tammany Hall, is set for August 15..

Missing Boy Hunted.

Martinsburg, W. Va., August 3.—Relatives yesterday asked police here to institute a search through this section for Buford Nicholson, 16, resident of the Bunker Hill section of this county, missing from his home since Saturday. He was described as 5 feet tall, with brown eyes, dark hair and weighing about 130 pounds, with two small scars on head.

sections throughout the city was attacked by Charles C. Collins, A. A. A. counsel, who represented Divilio. He offered witnesses—employes of the local A. A. A. Club—who testified to "hundreds of inquiries—from Washington and out-of-town motorists as to the meaning of the three yellow lines painted along curbings to denote parking limit from corners.

It was agreed the new regulation was adopted in the interest of highway safety—to permit wider vision at dangerous intersections—but numerous witnesses contended that "no parking" signs should be erected or the entire curb should be painted a solid color to eliminate existing confusion over purposes of the yellow marks.

There is no other city in the country, said Richard Ham, auto club safety director, with a similar system of marking curb lines to prohibit parking near intersections. And in most cases, he added, careful surveys are made of each corner to determine conditions before applying a ban.

Under the present District regulation, it was pointed out, the parking prohibition is enforced at all intersections irrespective of conditions.

Although the new law specifically prohibits parking from an intersection to a point "20 feet beyond the building line," Walter Pinkus, computor in the District surveyor's office, testified his bureau was not asked to determine the various building lines before the regulation was enacted.

"The line of a house or building," he said, "does not necessarily determine the building line. The line varies at nearly every corner. The only accurate way to fix the line is by a survey—and this was never done."

At the corner where Divilio was ticketed, Pinkus said, the yellow "no parking" markings are 49 feet from the intersection on one side of the street and 44½ feet on the other side.

Divilio testified he was out of the city when the regulatoin was adopted and parked his car contrary to the curb markings when he returned.

"I didn't even see them (the yellow lines) and didn't know what they meant until after a policeman told me—and I already had the ticket," said Divilio.

Collins told Judge Casey that members of the A. A. A. were dissatisfied with the new law and have flooded his office with complaints. He said the regulation was unreasonable in that it failed to enhance safety—with the exception of a few points—and took "much-needed" parking space away from local motorists.

Meanwhile, several motorists complained to The Post yesterday that a new parking "trap" had resulted from enforcement of the ban at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

At this point, the yellow markings are painted less than 10 feet from a fire plug. To park legally (according to the lines) places the motorist too close to the fire plug. Yet there is no sign prohibiting parking.

A policeman was observed standing at the corner as numerous cars parked and the drivers departed. He made no efforts to warn the motorists against parking, but promptly placed tickets on the "offending" cars after the owners had left.

'Bespatted' U.S. Envoys' Job Is Hard, Hull Says

Cites Fever-Ridden Posts in Africa, Asia, Tropics.

Combatting the idea the American Foreign Service is a "bespatted and stuffed-shirt outfit," Secretary of State Hull took occasion yesterday to emphasize the hazards and hard work encountered by members in various parts of the world.

Writing in "The American Foreign Service Journal," he commented: "The recent death of Joan J. O'Keefe, vice consul and clerk in charge of the consulate at Buenaventura, Colombia, deserves more notice than it has received particularly in view of articles which appear in the press which represent the Foreign Service as composed exclusively of persons of the bespatted and stuffed-shirt variety, whose most ardent work is collecting gossip at luncheons and cocktail parties or quarreling over questions of social precedence."

Vice Consul O'Keefe, he pointed out, died of malignant malaria contracted in the performance of his duties. "In spite of the splendid co-operation of our naval authorities, who furnished hydroplanes and medical assistance to transport him from Buenaventura to the Gorgas Hospital at Panama," he remarked, "I regret to say it was not possible to save his life."

Cites Fever-Ridden Posts.

The secretary recognized that "such posts as London, Paris, Berlin or Rome naturally loom large in the public mind," but he emphasized "we must not forget the work of the foreign service is also being carried on in fever-ridden posts in Asia and Africa and in unhealthful tropical seaports."

"Officers and clerks at such posts," he said, "are more familiar with bad living conditions and with difficult and trying tasks than with cocktail parties. They have more experience of malaria than of spats.

"Even in Europe any picture of the activities of the service, which pretends to completeness, must include the Spanish posts during the past year and a half and at the present time the posts of central Europe, in which the enormous increase in immigration work has resulted in a pressure upon officers and clerks carried to the breaking point and beyond. Only recently my attention was called to the fine spirit shown by Lee Worley, consul at Valencia, who, in spite of appendicitis in a dangerous stage, showed the greatest reluctance to leave his post. Thanks again to our naval authorities it was possible to move him to Marseille on board a destroyer and an operation was performed just in time.

65 Lost Lives in Service.

"I am reminded of other officers who have shown a high sense of duty and who have rendered conspicuous services during the years I have been secretary of state: Of Engert in Addis Ababa; of Wendelin at Madrid, and of other officers in Spain; of Atcheson and Paxton in connection with the sinking of the Panay; of the officers and clerks of the China service of the past year; and of Theodore Marriner at Beirut, and of his tragic death last October.

"There is a tablet inside the main entrance to the Department of State on which are recorded the names of 65 members of the foreign service who have lost their lives while performing the duties of the service. Some have been killed; others have died of diseases contracted at unhealthful posts; still others have been victims of earthquake and hurricane. It is an appropriate and impressive reminder of what the work of the service involves and no amount of uninformed talk about the failings of the service, real or imagined, can obscure its significance."

G. O. P. to Try to Add Midwest Congressmen

Representative J. W. Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, said yesterday that Republicans will hold a conference of candidates at Washington, Ind., on August 27, in a drive to increase the number of Republican House members from the Midwest. Martin announced other meetings would be held later in Ohio, Michigan, Iowa and Illinois.

Azadia Newman Wed to Movie Actor

portrait artist who is a member of a prominent Washington family, was wed at Phoenix, Ariz., yesterday to Scott Colton, moving picture actor. The bride is the daughter of the late Edwin A. Newman, of Washington, once chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Colton, a native of Baltimore, was Scott Vanderkalk before entering the movies. The bride is shown with a portrait of Vice President Garner, who called the bushy eyebrows "simply breathtaking."

Italy Excludes Foreign Jews From Schools

1st Anti-Semitic Measure of New 'Aryanism' Is Limited in Scope.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 3.—The Italian government today announced the first of anti-Semitic measures foreshadowed by the recently promulgated Fascist doctrine which holds that Italy's 47,000 Jews "do not belong to the Italian race."

The order barred foreign Jews from Italian schools—a measure of limited scope, since it does not affect Italian Jews, and the number of foreign Jews normally attending Italian schools is not large.

Foreigners attending Italian schools in 1936-37 totaled 2,612, but the proportion of Jews was not known.

Other more stringent regulations were expected to follow. According to creditable sources, a comprehensive law governing the activities of Italian Jews was being formulated, and the Fascist Grand Council was expected to act on it October 1.

One reliable informant said the prospective racial law probably would have these general objectives:

Elimination of Jews from the general staffs of the armed forces, from journalism, teaching and arts such as motion pictures, literature and painting, from political and economic positions connected with the state, from the Fascist party and from Fascist syndicates.

Establishment of a ratio of Jews to "Aryans" in such professions as law, medicine and engineering.

Limitation of the number of Jews eligible to receive university degrees.

Supervision of Jewish economic activity in order to prevent large Jewish-controlled commercial or financial interests. Individual Jewish enterprise would not be restricted.

Berlin, August 3 (AP).—A law made public today decreed wills hereafter must be drafted "in accordance with sound instincts of the German people and with due consideration of the testator's duty toward his family and community."

The law makes an "Aryan's" testament invalid if a Jew is made a beneficiary and near "Aryan" relatives ignored.

Cincinnati Gas Co. Asks SEC Permit To Reduce Capital

New York, August 3 (AP).—Hubert C. Blackwell, president of Cincinnati Gas & Electric Co., announced today his company was applying to the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington for permission to reduce the stated capital of the company, creating a $22,500,000 special surplus fund to permit declaration of dividends in accordance with SEC rules.

Cincinnati Gas & Electric Co. is controlled by Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation, which May 15 last was forced to omit its common dividend because of an SEC ruling in April that no common distributions be made and charged to "surplus at December 31, 1937."

The action in reduction of capital of Cincinnati Gas was regarded as the first step in a program designed to effect write-downs aggregating well above $100,000,000 throughout the $700,000,000 Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation system to permit payment of dividends with SEC approval.

Frank B. Swiggard Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services for Frank B. Swiggard, 69, retired clerk at the City Postoffice, will be held at St. Peter's Catholic Church, with requiem mass tomorrow at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Swiggard died Tuesday at his residence, 208 Fourth street southeast. He was a native of Washington, where he was born January 5, 1869.

In December, 1890, he was appointed a letter carrier at the Postoffice, and was transferred to clerk on April 1, 1903. He served at various sub-stations throughout the city and at his retirement on August 1, 1930, was a clerk at the southwest station.

Surviving Mr. Swiggard is his wife the former Frances Jost, whom he married February 9, 1916.

Loyalists Push Deep Into Rebel Teruel Defense

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, Aug. 3.—Spanish loyalists tonight were encircling Albarracin, gateway to the insurgent-held city of Teruel, in a swift offensive that carried them deep into enemy territory, government dispatches reported.

In the Gandesa sector along the Catalonian border, 120 miles northeast of Teruel up the Ebro Valley, four divisions of the loyalist international brigades fought stubbornly against one of the most violent insurgent bombardments of the war, holding their 20-mile gains.

The offensive around Teruel, designed to stall Gen. Franco's sweep down the Teruel-Sagunto highway and his assault on Sagunto and Valencia on the Mediterranean coast, produced swift victories for the loyalists because Franco was forced to pull his crack troops out of the sector and rush them to Gandesa.

Hold Strategic Heights.

Surprise attacks on the western limits of Teruel Province, mostly in the Albarracin zone 18 miles west of the city toward Madrid were said in Barcelona dispatches to have given the government control of four towns and strategic heights of the Universales Mountains.

At Frias, 10 miles southwest of Albarracin, the entire enemy garrison was said to have been captured before the loyalists moved on toward Calomede and Albarracin.

Gen. Jose Miaja, commander of the government's forces defending th Valencia Coast, sent new troops into the attack today, and seized the town of Coldu Guaralaviar outside Albarracin. The victory opened a network of roads into Albarracin on the south, north and northwest of the objective.

Fall Imminent.

A government communique said the fall of Albarracin appeared imminent. With the capture of Albarracin, it was said, the loyalists would be in a position to drive down upon the rear of Franco's forces pointed toward the Mediterranean.

In the Gandesa zone Franco's artillery, far outnumbering the field pieces of the loyalists, continued a merciless shelling of the 20,000 men of the international brigades for the third successive day between Gandesa and the banks of the Ebro.

The battle appeared to be deadlocked, with the loyalists refusing to budge from their gains and digging in with machine guns in olive groves and behind rocks of the rugged countryside.

More than 200 insurgent bombing and fighting planes were said to be joining in the attempt to rout the foreign volunteers of the loyalists.

Barcelona Bombed.

Barcelona, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—Gen. Franco's bombing planes raided Barcelona tonight for the first time in 10 days, and dropped high-powered explosives for more than an hour.

Another flight of insurgent trimotors bombed the town of Aguilas in Murcia Province, just below the government naval base at Cartagena, then swept low and machine-gunned men, women and children racing through the streets seeking shelter.

Pope Pius Will Beatify Nun Who Died in U. S.

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Aug. 3 (AP).—A Vatican news service announced today a decree authorizing the beatification of Frances Xavier abrini, an Italian nun, who worked and died in the United States, would be read next Saturday in the presence of Pope Pius.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Reginald Stewart conducts the National Symphony in the eighth summer concert at the Potomac Watergate. Program: Fugue in E minor (Mendelssohn-Stewart), Symphony No. 4 in F minor (Chaikovski), Overture-Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet" (Chaikovski), Polovetskian Dances from "Knaz Igor" (Borodin), "Espana" (Chabrier).

Banks of clouds and flashes of lightning along the northwest horizon did not deter music lovers from gathering at the Potomac Watergate last night, and an audience of 10,000 applauded the National Symphony Orchestra and its guest conductor, Reginald Stewart, who made his second appearance of the week on the podium. The threatening storm passed in the distance, and the concert proceeded without interruption save the customary pause for relaxation. At the close a cordial ovation told the visiting Canadian director that his work had been appreciated and that he will be welcome in Washington whenever he chooses to return.

Mr. Stewart began the program with his arrangement of the E minor fugue which Mendelssohn wrote for the piano a century ago. In its enlarge version the work assumed instrumental colors and dynamic dimensions of which the composer may have dreamed, but which he certainly did not indicate. The transcription is skillful and effective, and one surmises that Mr. Stewart, who is a pianist, took particular pleasure in transvaluing a piece which he admires. The fugue, so adroit in contrapuntal writing, may be considered one of Mendelssohn's tributes to Bach, whom he honored above all musical masters.

Chaikovski's F minor symphony, the major work of the program, received a spirited reading at the hands of the conductor, despite a sudden halt brought about by a short circuit in the lighting system. Just before the musicians reached the climax of the principal theme in the last movement, darkness fell on the stage, but the phrase was finished without a break. After a brief pause the lights came on and Mr. Stewart resumed the movement exactly where he had been obliged to stop.

The second half of the program offered music thoroughly familiar to all concert-goers: Chaikovski's tonal narrative of the tragedy of Romeo and Juliet, Borodin's lively ballet dances from "Knaz Igor," and Chabrier's rhapsodic "Espana."

Enthusiastic applause brought Mr. Stewart back for two extra numbers, Strauss' "Wein, Weib und Gesang" and the sailors' dance from Glier's "Krasni Mak." These additions failed to satisfy the auditors, who clamored for more. Not having anticipated that he would need more than two encores, Mr. Stewart put to a vote which of the selections he should repeat, and the Strauss waltz was the choice of the majority.

Ice Freezes Blaze Before It Injures Beltsville Center

The center is equipped with fire extinguishers, which emit a gas that turns into dry ice. The ice "freezes" the fire.

D. C. Police Third In Pistol Match

Cumberland, Md., Aug 3 (AP).—Pistol teams of West Virginia and Pennsylvania State Police tied today in the Cumberland Police Department target match, but the West Virginia team took the title on its performance in rapid firing.

Two teams, each of five men, tied with a total of 1,498, but the West Virginians had scored 497 in rapid fire, compared to 496 for the Pennsylvanians.

The Washington, D. C., police team was third with 1,452. Other team results were: Baltimore police, 1,448; Pittsburgh police, 1,428; Maryland State police, 1,416; Cumberland first team, 1,383; Montgomery County, Md., police, 1,363, Cumberland second team, 1,225 and Celanese industrial police, 1,209.

Democratic Scrap In Pennsylvania Returns to Judge

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 3 (AP).—A new duel between the Democratic strength in Pennsylvania's Legislature and the courts today for the right to investigate charges against Gov. George H. Earle and 13 associates put the entire case back where it started three months ago—before a county judge.

The crux of today's court fight was the constitutionality of laws passed by a special session of the General Assembly to suspend a projected grand jury inquiry and allow a legislative committee to investigate "openly."

Judge Paul N. Schaeffer, assigned by the Supreme Court to supervise the court inquiry, refused today to rescind an order impounding evidence collected for the grand jury investigation and prohibiting District Attorney Carl B. Shelley and other witnesses from testifying about it before the legislators. He agreed to rule on constitutionality of the new laws.

Smoking Process Enriches Turkey, U.S. Bureau Finds

The flavor of turkey meat can be enriched by a process of smoking, it was revealed yesterday by officials of the Department of Agriculture Experimental Station at Beltsville, Md.

Successful tests in the smoking of turkey similar to that of hams, have been conducted at the experimental station with birds 28 weeks old. At this age the turkey has reached a stage when its meat is firm and mature but still tender.

The meat is soaked in a solution of salt, saltpeter and sugar for a week and then hung in a smokehouse for several hours.

If a demand for smoked turkey is created, experimental station officials said breeders could operate large poultry houses throughout the year instead of just in the summer.

U. S. Considers Relaxing Ties On Credit Unit

Retail Association Seeks to Resume Activities as Single Agency.

By the Associated Press.

The Justice Department studied yesterday the advisability of modifying a 5-year-old consent decree restricting trade practices of the National Retail Credit Association.

Conferences already have been held between Government attorneys and representatives of the association, informed persons said, but no decision has been reached.

The National Retail Credit Association is a national trade organization of 14,141 members. Officials here said the Government filed antitrust violation charges against the organization in 1933, whereupon the association joined in a consent decree which was filed in the eastern Federal District Court of Missouri, October 6, 1933.

Modification Asked.

The decree enjoined the association from dividing territory exclusively among its membership and from discriminating against nonmembers in the sale of credit information. Justice Department officials long have viewed the decree as one of the most important antitrust actions in recent years.

R. P. Shealey, a Washington attorney, and Baker, Botts, Andrews and Wharton, a Houston, Tex., legal firm, jointly asked for modification of the decree.

"No longer," their brief said, "should the decree be permitted to stand as a cloud" upon the activities of association members.

Single Agency Urged.

The brief, which Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold has referred to Attorney Edward P. Hodges for study, argued that retail consumer credit service can best be given to any community by a single credit reporting agency. It denied that establishment of a single reporting agency or the practice of withholding information from non-members would constitute a violation of the Sherman antitrust law.

The brief further argued that the consent decree is not applicable to members of the association not specifically named in the decree and suggested that changed economic conditions justified modification of the original terms.

Government attorneys privately expressed doubt that Attorney General Cummings would approve a revision of the 1933 decree. Since negotiations began, they said, nearly a dozen independent credit organizations have protested any revision.

"The National Retail Credit Association will have to present some pretty strong arguments," said one antitrust division attorney. "It may be necessary to hold a public hearing."

Quantico Low Bid Listed.

Water Spider Holds Fish In Air and Eats It Up

St. Petersburg, Fla., Aug. 3 (AP).—This haven of deep-sea fishermen and their tales had a new story today—of a water spider that caught a 3-inch goldfish in a lily pool.

Mrs. H. W. Bryan reported finding the half-dollar-size spider after it had caught the fish. Witnesses she called said the spider clung to a lily pad, held the fish's mouth and gills above water until it died, then began to eat its catch.

Pan-American Farm School Plan Revealed

New Orleans, Aug. 3 (AP).—James Monroe Smith, president of Louisiana State University, told members of the New Orleans Consular Corps tonight of plans for the institution at L. S. U. of a Pan-American agricultural school by September, 1939, for farmers from Latin-American countries.

U. S. Orders Study Of Crabmeat Trade

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Fisheries undertook yesterday a technological study of the domestic crabmeat industry to determine methods or improving production and marketing.

Charles E. Jackson, acting commissioner of the bureau, said one chemist and a bacteriologist had been assigned to the investigation and that recommendations would be made to the industry probably by the end of the year.

Congress appropriated $10,000 for the investigation. Temporary laboratory headquarters have been set up at Crisfield Md., and fishery experts are studying crab canneries in the Chesapeake Bay region.

When A Strike Is No Strike.

In a decision which establishes a precedent of considerable potential importance, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia has ruled that inter-union fights are not labor disputes within the meaning of the Wagner act.

Not infrequently in the past employers have found themselves between two fires even while attempting loyally to carry out their obligations under the Wagner act. Willing to enter a collective bargaining agreement with their employes, they have run up against the obstacle that in making such an agreement with one independent union they have offended its rival. The result sometimes has been strikes, not specifically directed against the employer but nonetheless causing him considerable loss.

The Circuit Court of Appeals has now held that the right to picket, a right growing out of the right to strike, does not obtain when the dispute is not between employer and employes but between rival unions. In the particular case before them, therefore, they have upheld the granting of an antipicketing injunction issued by a district court against A. F. of L. unions which went on strike when an employer signed a collective bargaining agreement with C. I. O. unions that claimed a majority of the workers.

In such a case the NLRB is clearly called upon to hold an election to determine the wishes of the majority. Pending this determination employers are amply entitled to the protection of their property when menaced by factional labor disputes.

And Gold Still Comes.

The Treasury announced a few days ago that our monetary gold stocks have risen above $13,000,000,000, the highest total ever recorded, and estimated to amount to 55 per cent of the world's monetary gold stocks. This supply is being steadily augmented. At the beginning of the week, for instance, a shipment of gold from Japan was announced, adding another $5,800,000 to the more than $100,000,000 sent here from that country since the end of last February.

Most of the $5,500,000,000 of gold acquired since devaluation of the dollar represents an inflow of foreign funds which have been exchanged for our goods or invested in our securities. In other words, we have parted with consumable commodities and claims to wealth in exchange for superfluous metal. So long as trade remains depressed, and the Administration is seeking to stimulate activity by releasing impounded gold, the continued influx creates no immediate problem. On the contrary, it is welcomed by those who cling to the hope that a stimulative effect upon business will result from piling up idle reserves.

To those who look ahead, however, a good many perturbing questions are suggested by this steady inflow of the yellow metal. It is being asked, for instance, whether the United States would continue to buy gold in unlimited quantities in the event of an European war. The second largest holder of gold at the present time is Great Britain, with less than one-third as much as we have. France is a poor third and of the Fascist powers Germany is almost denuded of gold, while Italy and Japan have considerably less than $500,000,000 of gold between them.

In the event of a general European war there is no knowing how far the belligerents might go in divesting themselves of gold stocks. Experience appears to show that nations are prepared to surrender any amount of gold when other means of buying necessary war supplies are lacking. The existing heavy concentration of the metal in the United States makes the outlook for restoration of an effective international gold standard seem extremely remote. And for that reason nations with comparatively little gold might well feel that complete dissipation of their reserves would merely represent the logical end of an irresistible trend.

Barring the possibility of a return of more settled political conditions, and repatriation of some of the billions belonging to frightened foreigners, there is danger of discovery that we have exchanged tangible possessions and parted with ownership of valuable securities in exchange for a metal that has lost its prestige.

Apart from this aspect of the gold problem the United States is confronted by the question of how to prevent excessive gold acquisitions from becoming a source of uncontrollable inflation. At the present time, of course, this danger is in abeyance. But in the future, as in the recent past, it may become a very active problem and bring renewed demands for sterilization of gold and stiffening of member bank reserve requirements.

The Era Of Change.

The civilized world has always been in a state of flux. Change is the law for nations as well as for men and women. Nature abhors the static. But at no other time in recorded history has the kaleidoscope of world events produced more rapidly changing patterns than at present. It is difficult to keep up with the bare developments, let alone understand their full significance.

Who, for instance, would have imagined that a little over a year of undeclared warfare between Japan and China would have affected the balance of power in the Far East as profoundly as is the case. Japan's sun of empire is now beset with ominous clouds. And there is real indication that out of the travail and the torment of these past months a great, united and progressive China may eventually arise.

Similarly, recent years have seen startling changes in the European picture. Since 1933 Germany's rise to material power and political influence has been as rocketlike as her collapse in 1918. Russia has completely transformed her life to become more of a world force than ever before. The Old World is going through alterations of which only the barest outlines are as yet apparent. It is possible that the Europe of tomorrow will be as different from that of today as the present situation differs from that of 25 years ago. And oceans do not limit the effect of such dislocations.

The Spanish civil war was a mere incident when it began. Yet its repercussions have reverberated with increasing force throughout the world. Before 1936, Spain's cultural domain extended far beyond the sphere of its political sovereignty. The Ibero-American movement was culturally more potent than Pan-Americanism. With the collapse in Spain Pan-Americanism has emerged as a force whose profound consequences are little realized even in the United States.

The pendulum does not swing in one direction alone. The Balkans, until recently called the cockpit of Europe, today constitute one of the most peaceful sections of that continent. Meantime, the tides of nationalism, once limited to the Western world, have spilled over into the East. Palestine and Syria are in turmoil. At a time when imperialism is the new rallying cry of dictators the older imperialist powers appear to be retreating from the responsibilities of empire.

But perhaps the greatest change that has taken place in the world recently is that having to do with moral values. Standards of conduct to which all nations once subscribed, and which in large measure they honored, have been ruthlessly sacrificed. Today no practice is regarded as beyond the pale, provided it makes for national aggrandizement. Bad faith has become an instrument of policy. The development is both a reflection of the prevailing confusion and a factor contributing to it.

Only twenty-four years ago this week, Europe plunged light-heartedly into war. That action released pent-up forces which no Armistice could corral, no Treaty of Peace restore to orderly confinement.

Nothing Wrong With Kansas.

The defeat of the Rev. Gerald B. Winrod in the Kansas Senatorial primaries is a tribute to the good sense and sound Americanism of Republican voters in the Sunflower State.

In its time Kansas has had its fair share of freak candidates and some of them have even managed to get themselves elected. Winrod's bid for office on a platform of racial prejudice and religious bigotry was for that reason treated as no laughing matter by responsible Kansans jealous of the good name of their State.

Very wisely, the challenge was met headon by such Republicans as John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, by William Allen White and others. Ministerial groups also denounced the injection of Ku Kluxism into the campaign.

The net effect of this assault on Winrod, and what he allegedly stood for, was to deflate his balloon. Some weeks ago his nomination seemed possible. Actually he turned out to be a poor third among four contestants. This is a victory not only for Kansas but also for the Nation. There is no place for calculated intolerance in the politics of any American party.

Doing Something About It.

That the Weather Man's prophecies have sometimes the pleasing uncertainty of race track selections is due to the fact that the meteorologist (to quote Prof. McNish, of the Carnegie Institution) has to content himself with a two-dimensional picture for the solving of a three-dimensional problem.

The scanty information on which he bases his deductions has recently been augmented by fragmentary data gathered in the stratosphere by radio meteorographs carried by small balloons. Already the optimistic boys are looking forward to the days when they will be able to forecast the weather for entire seasons with all the cool assurance of the Hagerstown almanac.

That's on the one hand. On the other take a squint at Thunderbird, a charm which brings rain, originally owned by the Gros Ventres Indians of North Dakota, which thirty years ago found its way to a New York museum. Following recent droughts the Gros Ventres regained possession of the charm. And then see what happened in their territory. Floods. Too darned much of a good thing.

This superfluity of water has caused a Chippewa employe of the Indian Service to urge the Government to take over the charm and "let the white man control the weather." The Navajo Desert, he thinks, would be a good place to park the Thunderbird.

Place your bets, gentlemen; Radiograph or Thunderbird?

In The Virginia Tradition.

William E. Dodd, jr., ran his primary campaign in the Eighth Congressional District of Virginia on the slogan that "a vote for me is a vote for Roosevelt." His comprehensive indorsement of everything the New Deal has done, or may do, was not necessarily inept in the case of so youthful a candidate, whose connection with the constituency, moreover, is far more tenuous than is the custom in Virginia politics. And Mr. Dodd's effort to ride into office on the President's coattails had obvious publicity values. It gave national significance to this local election.

What Mr. Dodd and his backers do not seem to have realized, however, is the difficulty of winning on both sides of a toss. The more the defeated candidate insisted that a vote for him would be a vote for the President, the more he implied that a vote against him must be regarded as a vote against the President. And in the upshot there were 19,734 such votes, as against 6,555 for Mr. Dodd.

This smashing defeat, in which the obliterated candidate lost every one of the fifteen counties and all but a handful of precincts in the constituency, could too easily be regarded as an important repudiation of the New Deal. To reach that conclusion one would need to overlook both the great popularity of Representative Smith and the obvious inexperience of his opponent. But if the neighboring election gives no reliable proof of any anti-Administration tide in Virginia it does unquestionably confirm the fine tradition of that State in independent thinking.

From the outset of the campaign Mr. Smith recognized and profited from this tradition. There were times when he might have temporized on the essential issue. The C. I. O. opposed him, and its chief lives in his district. The Administration, through the ardent Mr. Ickes, attacked him. The constituency is the home of thousands of Government employes. But Mr. Smith squarely accepted the calculated challenge of his opponent, and the results show his political sagacity in refusing to "yield honest convictions to the will of others."

It is this complete flop of an attempted purge on the threshold of the National Capital which makes the primary in the Eighth Virginia District of real significance. It is the rejection of a self-advertised Roosevelt rubber stamp which overshadows alike the defeat of another ardent New Dealer in the maritime counties of Virginia and the renomination of stanch supporters of the President in three of West Virginia's six Congressional districts.

The issue which was posed in the historic countryside across the Potomac is the old and fundamental issue of local self-government. And all who admire the American system will rejoice that Virginia has again flatly repudiated external pressures cunningly designed to chain the Old Dominion to the wheels of a centralized Federal bureaucracy.

From Byron To Bedaux.

"Give me a lever long enough," said Archimedes, "and I'll move the world."

Possibly modern Greece believes that it has found this lever in Charles E. Bedaux, American efficiency expert and designer of the plant-production system that bears his name. Report has it that Mr. Bedaux is to be retained by the Greek government as adviser for a reorganization project affecting the entire economic structure of the country. That would follow on the American tour of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor which Mr. Bedeaux was said to sponsor, and which did not come off.

The efficiency expert is reported to be more enthusiastic about the possibilities of Greece and well he may be. Too often in this country production systems have met with the obstacle that the workers object to functioning purely as machines. Theoretically, no such impediment should bar his road in Greece. That country, says Mr. Bedaux, "now marches as one man." The nation which gave the word "democracy" to the world is now a dictatorship.

Yet in the course of its long and varied history Greece has known many dictatorships, of which the Metaxas regime is but the latest. Who, for instance, now remembers Pangalos, who not so many years ago was ruling the roost at Athens in a manner distinctly imitative of Mussolini?

Of all the peoples of Europe, the Greeks would seem to be among the least likely to succumb to prolonged regimentation. Dissent is in their blood, the instinct for liberty the warp and woof of their character. The fact helps to explain the frequent and violent overturns that have occurred under the shadow of the Parthenon since that land won its freedom from the Turks. Greece has its Spartan tradition of regimentation. But even more her people have been guided by the Athenian love of freedom.

A biologist sticks his head up and declares that the horse is here to stay. All right, but this decision on the part of the horse will just about ruin his reputation for having horse sense.

"Loose Language."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial August 2 entitled "Loose Language" is very timely on a subject which the average Washington citizen is reluctant to mention publicly through a general fear of stirring up discord.

The business people, newspapers and politicians of the city have ignored this somewhat touchy question for fear of repercussions. The law-abiding element of Washington's Negro population realizes very well the conditions as they exist, and are doubtless anxious to see them improved for the benefit of all concerned, and to bring better credit on their race.

It is to be regretted that so-called leaders among the local colored population, while ever so willing to discuss and harp on the least brutality, do not at the same time mention the brutality of certain offenses. One fundamental fact should not be overlooked, and that is that with all the "rights" that all citizens enjoy, they likewise have "responsibilities" which should justly earn those rights.

You are to be congratulated on this wonderful, short editorial, and do not forget that your sentiments are shared by many thousands of good local citizens.

C. M. GRILLE.
E. S. WARREN.

Washington, Aug. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with amazement your editorial entitled "Loose Language," which appeared in your issue of August 2. It is difficult to understand how a publication like The Post could even inferentially indorse the killings perpetrated by the Washington police in their lawless enforcement of the law. (There was no such indorsement, inferentially or otherwise.—Editor.)

It is indeed strange that The Post should at long last be stirred to editorial comment, when the colored citizenry have finally demanded protection from the constituted authorities, yet has remained conspicuously silent when defenseless Negroes have been shot down for no other crime than being colored. I cite the cases of McKnight, Leroy Keys and Lawrence Basey.

It is time for The Post to know and the officials of Washington to know that the colored citizenry are no longer going to sit supinely by and be the innocent victims of murderers parading with police badges, batons and pistols.

If this be "loose language" I do not understand the meaning of the term. I think rather that it is "strong language," but aptly descriptive of the barbarism which newspapers like The Post and the officials have permitteid to run rampant without as much as a word of protest.

Government Debt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Lindley in The Post of August 1 tells us of surprising deductions concerning national debt in Mr. Wallace's recent speech in Des Moines.

If, indeed, Mr. Wallace said that the total burden of debt of the people of the United States is now $6,000,000,000 less than it was in 1930, it means, since the national debt has increased by $20,000,000,000 and the total of the debts of States and localities has not changed materially, that personal and corporation debts have decreased $26,000,000,000. Very little of this represents debt paid off in this period of depression. An inconsequential few corporations have done it, but some of the big ones have increased theirs. Of those individuals who were in debt in 1930 and have paid up, more have increased their indebtedness and new ones have become indebted. Corporations as a whole can change money into buildings, machinery and equipment, but there is no way to change these assets back into money. If the facts are as stated it means that over $20,000,000,000 of debts have been wiped out in bankruptcies and reorganizations, which means that the holders of these notes and bonds have lost all that money—surely nothing to which the Administration should point with pride.

Mr. Wallace treats Government and business debts as though one could be exchanged for the other with no particular effect on the public welfare. They are actually entirely different in this respect. Government debt is money spent with little prospect of any continuing return. Business debt, evidenced by notes and bonds, is never incurred without prospects of continuing returns and sound principal sufficient to induce lenders to part with their money.

As Mr. Wallace recognizes, an expansion of business debt normally occurs with the growth and development of a country. I have never read a recognized economist advocating the increase of Government debt. Many deplore it, as has our President. No, Government debt cannot be substituted for business debt without loss to the public.

Everyone knows that businessmen have been alarmed and hurt by novel and destructive laws and suggestions of others to come, as well as new restrictions and regulations. These have taken out of leaders of business the will to enlarge their enterprises or to create new ones. To give this as an excuse for increasing Government spending is a fine example of propaganda for the purpose of influencing unthinking people.

The speaker seems to have the impression that the Government owns all the productive forces of our country and can tax them at will. The fact is, of course, that the people and owners of these forces own them and own the Government, too.

Large as the Government debt is and fast as it has been increasing, what gives us most concern is that it shows no sign of slowing up.

Water Gate "Circus."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I attended the circus at the Water Gate on July 27. Ye gods! Do they call that music? Shades of Beethoven, Brahms, Sebelius and a host of real musicians! It was awful—a disgrace to the National Symphony Orchestra.

I speak for several music lovers who were in full agreement. No more of that stuff for us! C. N. W.

Washington, July 28.

The program on July 27, conducted by Ferde Grofe, consisted of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," "Negro Heaven" and sundry compositions by Mr. Grofe, including his "Hollywood" suite and excerpts from the "Mississippi" and "Grand Canyon" suites.—Editor.

As Texans Weigh Lee O'Daniel

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently The Post carried news that once more Texas has turned "wild and woolly" and that we had chosen "a radio crooning flour broker, until a few weeks ago quite unknown to the public," for our next Governor.

I resent such a description of our W. Lee O'Daniel, and so do other Texans.

Did you know that Lee O'Daniel started at the bottom of the ladder? He once worked in a flour mill for $10 a week, and by sheer business ability now owns a business of his own. For years he was the president of the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce. And as for being unknown—for the past ten years every Texan that owns a radio has known W. Lee O'Daniel and loved him, not because he croons, which he doesn't, but because of his wonderful personality, his honesty, his sincerity and good business judgment. He has plans for building factories, which we certainly need, and making Texas a greater State.

For years the Texas government has been ruled by certain big interests. Every well-read Texan has known that. W. Lee O'Daniel is the "Waterloo" for this ring of politicians. Now we will have a man for Governor that has as his motto "Less Johnson Grass and Politicians—More Smokestacks and Business Men."

Mr. O'Daniel is deeply religious and as a hobby composes songs. A few years ago he composed "Beautiful Texas." This song has been on the lips of Texas boys, girls, men and women ever since he composed it. Naturally, then, we know our Lee O'Daniel quite well. At the time of the New London school disaster O'Daniel made the most inspiring talk along with the beautiful program his band put on. Such a man as he gives courage to those broken-hearted mothers and fathers to carry on. Each special event that comes our way O'Daniel has always had a program planned and with it a talk that has helped us appreciate the day more.

Long before we Texans thought of writing O'Daniel as Governor we knew him well. He was as close to our hearts as Will Rogers and as well loved. So you see, we haven't gone wild and woolly.

MRS. R. B. GRAVES.
Eliasville, Tex., July 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the votes for W. Lee O'Daniel in the State of Texas in the recent election have been counted, many editorials have been written throughout the United States and many opinions have been advanced as to the why of the big vote. It has been my privilege to read many of them, and as yet I have not read one which gave a satisfactory explanation of the vote as I see it.

I am just wondering if your paper will print an opinion from a small-town doctor of Texas, who has been working for the public for 30 years, and who, like many other Texans, listened to the programs put on the air by the abovementioned W. Lee O'Daniel.

It is my belief that the vote cast in Texas July 23 for Mr. O'Daniel was an expression of the common people; an expression of their trust in the basic principles of honesty and integrity, and they wanted to see a man in the Governor's chair who for years has preached more practical application of the Golden Rule and applied Christianity to more people in Texas than a lot of preachers, and who has made believers of them by precept and example. This man has ever had time to teach some of the Master's works to people. At times entire broadcasts have been devoted to teaching practical tidings of great joy. As to being unknown, just ask either of the big broadcasting companies how many people would have to hear a broadcast for $4,000 to answer it.

As to campaign promises, I think he made the most liberal he could make. The business of the State of Texas is the biggest business in the State. He has promised a business administration. Many people think business methods should be applied to running our government.

It seems to me the vote here would indicate the people realize that for an individual or nation to prosper, the teaching of the Man of Nazareth must be applied, and to me the interpretation of the vote is just a plain mandate of the people to governing classes to apply the teachings of the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule. Moses used the same rules and made a success of governing a nation. Why not a great success in Texas from the same principles?

Mansion House.

THOSE of us who were permanent at the hotel called it the mansion house. Arising out of the nineties, it had all the musty and dark curlicues of wall-paper design, high-pitched rooms, large windows, ornamental fireplaces and heavily turned wooden stairways. It was a place of gloomy labyrinthine red carpeted as with a purpose against sound; it was full of shadows that made people come quite suddenly upon you. And if the passer-by in the hall was but a drummer for the cement or sewing machine company and was whistling a bright tune, you would, withal, wonder what had brought him to the mansion house and what part he would play in the family that denizened the place.

It was easy to wonder this, because so many people came to stay a night and stayed much longer. Some of the girls stayed longer, because business always was good—though one girl became depressed one afternoon and while her portable phonograph ground endlessly "I Get the Blues When It Rains," leaped from one of the big windows to die in the alley by the door of the furnace room. Things were low for a few days; and the black captain of the bellmen shined the ornamental brass doorknobs as if to lift the atmosphere, and denied, for further purification, that he'd ever worked for the girls.

The two best known of the permanent guests didn't talk of the occurrence, even when the marble-walled lobby was full of the talk. The excitement was beneath both the Colonel and Mr. Garland. Both were above such experience, the Colonel through pride, Mr. Garland through an abiding outlook. Of the two, I knew the Colonel better.

He was a short man, with a pinched, pale face, but a bellowing voice. His cries to the bellman over a pint of corn liquor would vibrate the high-pitched room. And, when the short pint came, he would hand me the bottle—against his own desperate need—and his voice would soften to a ritualistic occasion, "Take a drink—no, take a bath," he would say.

When the bellman returned for his pay, the Colonel would explode:

"Oh, God, to have this degradation and annoyance heaped upon me, when I'm so alone." His hand would fly automatically to his left trouser pocket, to produce a crumpled bill; it seemed magical, as if the same bill were always used. And, then, "It's hell to live in such a dive as this, a lot of fancy women in the hall and men creeping in and out their rooms.

"You can't know how it depresses me. For years I lived in the Pendenis Club in Louisville. A coated waiter would place a bottle of the best liquor on the table, and you drank what you chose. When you finished drinking, you wrote on a slip of paper what was consumed and owed. Oh, God, and here this barbarian comes in with a pint of slop and a demand for pay . . ."

He seldom spoke of Mr. Garland. I don't think he understood him, the serenity that permitted Mr. Garland to sit all of afternoons in the big chairs by the windows. The Colonel would pace and watch Mr. Garland, and remark to me, "You know, the poor old fellow is nearly blind; and it's merciful he can't see the sin and iniquity of his surroundings . . ." At such moments, the captain of the bellman would be watching for the jerky motion of the Colonel's arm toward the elevator that indicated an unlawful pint.

Late one December afternoon Mr. Garland called me to his chair by the windows. He had never sought my company before. I had, on occasion, talked with him briefly, but guardedly against any house talk. His refinements were known to us.

"I want you to come to my room, I have something for you," he said.

He lived for 14 years in the same room. It filled the eye with all manner of small bric-a-brac, easy chairs, pictures of home scenes, such as family groups. On the bed was a covering such as the hotel wouldn't afford.

"I don't know your reading tastes, but I bought this for you today. You may accept it as a Christmas token, or just as something from one book lover to another."

It was Butler's "The Way of All Flesh." "And I bought myself that," he said, pointing to the cluttered wall. I read the framed lines:

"The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want.
"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures . . ."

* * *

The fire started one night near the elevator shaft and roared, like a blow-torch, through the mansion house. At the first sight of smoke the Colonel bounced from the door, a gust pursuing him, as in a comedy. The fancy women swarmed down the fire escape and some swung from windows on roped sheets. The drummers stampeded. The captain of the bellmen escaped in the first heat. We all escaped but Mr. Garland. He groped nearly to the stairway before the flames, which consumed the mansion house, became too much.

God's Coupons.

OUT of Los Angeles, that promissory land which produced the plans of Upton Sinclair and Dr. Townsend, there comes at last a proposal combining the kernels, as it were, of both these panaceas but without their faults. It is the invention of Prof. Oscar Bush, World-Wide Congressman, who asks a mandate from the citizens of the Fourteenth California District as their representative in a lesser body, the Congress of the United States.

Prof. Oscar Bush was elected World-Wide Congressman at the World-Wide Congress held at the regular meeting place of that body at 648 South Broadway, Los Angeles, in June, 1937. A pioneer, as he admits, in new age thinking, the professor celebrates impromptu, and one day, while cogitating in a church house, awaiting his turn to hose down the congregation with a flow of wisdom, he discovered afloat in the springs of his intellect a method of causing money to be and of distributing the same without taxation or other inconvenience. He has communicated his plan to President Roosevelt, and, though he may be overwishful, he perceives Presidential favor, if not indorsement, in the fact that within three days Mr. Marvin McIntyre, the President's No. 3 Man, thanked him for his courtesy in submitting his suggestions.

• • • •

UNLIKE Mr. Roosevelt's own Ponzi Plan, Prof. Oscar Bush's system entails no bothersome problems of interest, principal or ultimate come-uppance. It is a miracle.

"He is new-age-minded," Prof. Bush says of himself, using the third person the better to extol a genius of his own discovery and avoid immodest seeming, "He has made a life study of truth, money and economics. He receives messages from the ether, and is a medium through which these messages are transcribed to humanity.

"About a year ago his latest message about created money came while sitting in a small church waiting to be called as the speaker of the evening. He gave them a talk on created money, a thing he knew nothing about five minutes before. He showed how money can be created without taxation, without confiscation and no printing press money. He spoke of a system of coupons which he referred to as God's coupons and that no person can take from you. He said you will get them and you may cash them.

"These coupons are distributed to each person. They come in book form—100 coupons in each book. They are not money. You can cash them for money and the coupon is canceled, hence the slogan 'free money.' Free money is created just the same as God created man, beast and all other things."

• • • •

WITHIN THE SPACE of five minutes Prof. Oscar Bush thought of this, but it will be seen at a glance that he has eliminated the fatal fault in the plan of the good Mahatma Sinclair, who made toil a condition for the success of his idea and wrecked his wagon on the detestable truth that toil makes people tired, thus losing the governorship to Mr. Merriam, the champion bridge dedicator of the Golden West. He has conquered also the cruel discrimination against orphans, the flaw which aroused the humane instincts of a sentimental nation and condemned the Townsend Plan. Orphans have ever been objects of pity in this land, and when it became apparent that persons below the age of 60 without living parents to whom they could look for support would be excluded from the benefits of $200 a month, public opinion crushed the doctor's fallacy.

Prof. Bush's five-minute plan plainly substitutes created money for toil and removes the harsh inequality which Dr. Townsend imposed on orphans. When one book of coupons has been exhausted the Government will issue another, and so on, honoring the coupons with money voted by Congress in the form of dividends upon the national wealth.

"Would it be possible to distribute these coupon books by Christmas?" the professor asked Mr. Roosevelt in his letter of explanation. "This would be easy if you will answer the big question with the little word 'yes.'"

• • • •

IT WERE UNKIND to advise Prof. Oscar Bush that he is not the first explorer to stumble, blinded by the glare of golden streets and spires, into the El Dorado of the ether. Yet truth requires that he be gently told that he was not there first, but entered by a different gate long after Prof. David Cushman Coyle had settled down to play house.

U.S. Court Upholds Anti-Picket Order

Philadelphia, Aug. 3 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that the Wagner Labor Relations act gives a labor union no right to picket an employer while engaged in a jurisdictional dispute with another union.

The court held in a 2-to-1 decision that an employer picketed in such a case is entitled to an injunction until the Labor Board decides which union shall act as bargaining agent for the employes.

The ruling upheld a district court in keeping four A. F. of L. unions from picketing the Union Premier Food Stores, Inc., which the A. F. of L. union and the C. I. O.'s United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America disputed each other's right as bargaining agent for 1,500 employes.

Scene of New Far Eastern 'War'

Trouble has broken out afresh in the Far East, with Russia and Japan at odds over a section of land where the borders of Russia, Korea and Manchukuo meet (shaded area in inset map). Reports from the region said Japanese had recaptured a hill near Changkufeng (1) to which both nations assert rights, while Soviet planes bombed this vicinity and the region around Yuki (2).

Evian Conference

Observer Reports Europe Divided On Worth Of Effort To Solve Refugee Problem; Work At London Will Be Proof.

By C. Poznanski.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

ESTIMATES of the results of the Evian conference are completely contradictory. Some commentators—for example, the French Socialist press—call the conference a complete failure; others believe it an outstanding success.

This difference of appreciation is explained by the fact that two different yardsticks are applied.

First, the case of the pessimists: They argue that the Evian meeting was to have been an international "conference." This meant that it ought to have resulted in a convention which could bring at least some positive contribution toward the solution of the refugee problem. Instead of this only an intergovernmental committee developed which declared from the start that the basis of its work was existing laws and regulations—laws and regulations which, practically, render impossible a general solution.

Further, the pessimists submit that President Roosevelt wanted the conference to deal with the broad problem of political refugees. But the Evian committee limited its scope to refugees from Germany and Austria.

Optimists Base Hopes On U. S. Collaboration.

THOSE WHO hold an optimistic outlook take a different view.

First of all, certain Jewish quarters are not interested in the problem of political emigration in a broader sense. Rather shortsightedly they preferred limiting the matter to emigres from Germany and Austria. Their principal hope is that the new committee will be able by negotiations with the Hitler government to facilitate not only the emigration of German Jews, but also to enable them to take with them a part of their fortune, substantially larger than the 3 to 5 per cent which the German legislation at present permits.

In other quarters the point is stressed that the principal result of the conference is the establishment of collaboration by the United States in a matter which concerns European countries. It is true that the question is purely humanitarian. Nevertheless, the new committee, which will practically be run by Americans—for the key personality will be the American director—will have to collaborate with the League of Nations and the International Labor Office, whose director is also a citizen of the United States. Thus, it is reasoned, the London committee ordered at Evian, is an important step toward the collaboration of the western democracies.

One point was clear before the conference met. No country was prepared to change its internal laws regulating the immigration problem. Thus the scope of the conference was immediately restricted to a solution within the framework of the existing—and far from liberal—laws. Moreover, it developed on the first day that the opinions of the different delegations were widely divergent. Certain Latin-American delegates were principally concerned that nothing in the work of the conference should be construed as a condemnation of the totalitarian policy leading to emigration. For another example, Lord Winterton and M. Henry Berenger were determined that Italian refugees should not even be mentioned.

In these circumstances it was inevitable that the whole meeting should be no more than a starting point. All that could be done at Evian was to open the door for future action. From this view the optimists are right. The possibilities of future action are unlimited.

American Delegation Inserted Saving Clause.

IF THE Evian conference limited itself to refugees from Germany and Austria, the American delegation at least succeeded in including in the resolution the statement that the future London permanent intergovernmental committee will have not only to continue but also to "develop" the work of Evian. Thus the extension of the scope of the London committee to the problem of political refugees throughout the world remains possible.

However, M. Henry Berenger, in his closing speech, strongly emphasized that France is ready to give her whole-hearted support to the solution of the problem of German and Austrian refugees. This means, of course, that she maintains her right to veto consideration of other political refugees. The closing speech of Lord Winterton was given the same construction.

However, in the final analysis, everything will depend on the personality of its director. Granted, there will be the committee itself with its 30 or more government delegates. And there will be the president—probably Lord Winterton—and the four vice presidents. But the real work will be done by the director and his staff. It is the director who will negotiate with the governments; it is the director who will produce the plans.

As American, Director Will Have Big Advantage.

BEING AN American, the director will have one great advantage.

The eager acceptance by all countries of President Roosevelt's invitation to Evian and the whole story of the Evian meeting indicate clearly that for France and Great Britain, to say nothing of the Latin-American countries, collaboration with the United States is infinitely precious. They will not openly oppose anything presented as part of a deliberate policy of the U. S. A. Thus the director, who will presumably be a man of personality and who will have the confidence of Washington as well as the support of American public opinion will be able to do nearly anything he wants.

It is thus seen that Evian did not produce the solution or even an attempt at the solution of the refugees problem. But it has created an organism which might do very much, as well as nothing at all.

It is the work of the London committee and its director which will certify the judgment as to whether the Evian conference was a failure or a success.

Court Allows Dairy To Reorganize and Stay in Business

Admitting it was unable to pay its debts as they matured, Simpson Bros., Inc., dairymen, yesterday obtained from Justice James M. Proctor in District Court permission to reorganize the company under protective provisions of section 77-B of the bankruptcy act.

Stating that it had 55 employes, 20 trucks, and 1,800 customers, the petitioner said its principal assets, "while frozen," are of substantial value. It suggested that the company's earning power as a going concern be preserved so employes would not be thrown out of work and a solution of current difficulties could be found. One plan, the petition suggested, was a $100,000 Government loan.

The company's bill stated it had assets valued at $175,000 and liabilities of $175,087, and also asked that debts contracted after August 3 be given priority over those accrued prior to that date.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The British Attitude.

London, Aug. 3.

Much has been said in recent months about the decline of British prestige, but in fact Great Britain is still by common consent the arbiter of Europe. There is little reason to doubt that Hitler, if he can restrain his followers, will do nothing now which he thinks will make Britain his open and avowed enemy, and it is, of course, certain that France will make no move which would leave her without Britain as an ally. For the near future, barring an explosive incident, the course of events in Europe depends upon the policy of Great Britain.

• • • •

Since so much depends upon it, it is important to understand as fully as possible what is now determining British policy. One can easily be misled. For while it is easy enough to reach a fairly reliable impression of what the British are doing and easy to hear what they are saying, it is evident, it seems to me, that they have not yet made up their minds as to what they really think. They are acting, they are talking and they are anxiously meditating. They are acting on the theory that they are near to a war with Germany. They are talking on the theory that they may avert the war by a negotiated settlement with Germany. And they are asking themselves whether such a settlement is possible, and they are wondering whether they should believe what they so much wish to believe.

They are living, so to speak, at three levels, at the level of immediate action preparing for war, at the level of immediate diplomacy seeking an appeasement, and at the level of their ultimate convictions, wondering what those ultimate convictions are going to be. The visitor in England is sure to be misled if he does not take into account at all times these three simultaneous and yet apparently contradictory elements of the British attitude.

• • • •

Thus if one looks first at what the British government has been doing, it is clear that since midwinter Mr. Chamberlain has been taking important measures to prepare for war. There is first of all rearmament which has at least reached the point where all fear of Italy has disappeared and a knockout blow by Germany is no longer practicable. There is next the sealing of what is in substance an alliance with France, an alliance not merely by diplomats but by the soldiers, sailors and aviators. Third, there has been the demonstration given in May, that Britain will go with France, a demonstration confirmed by the King's visit and by the bold expedient of sending Lord Runciman to Prague, and finally, there is the indefinite postponement of the Italian agreement because Mussolini has been unwilling, or perhaps unable, to supplement it by a reconciliation with France.

In a word, Britain is arming and cementing her alliances. That is what nations do when they expect a war, and the concrete overt acts of the British government are based on that expectation.

• • • •

BUT AT the same time, and I think with equal determination, the British are refusing to act on the assumption that war is inevitable. So they continue on every possible occasion to extend their hands to Hitler seeking to find some ground on which to negotiate an agreement. There is no reason to doubt the sincerity of their diplomatic effort.

For the British, in spite of their appearance of calm and even of indifference, are a highly imaginative people. They have imagined with great clarity the devastating consequences of another war. They know that the war would be the most frightful known in human history, that it would be very long, and that it might degenerate in the end into a civil war of extermination over large areas of Europe and Asia. There is no doubt that they would pay almost any price to avoid war providing they could be persuaded that by paying the price they could avert war.

Feeling this way, they are bound to test every opportunity for negotiation. They must do this in the hope that the negotiation might succeed. And they must do it, even if they fail, because they cannot be comfortable with their consciences until they are completely certain that they have tried everything. They will take great risks, even the risk of strengthening their potential enemies and of dividing and demoralizing their allies, in the hope of saving Europe from the supreme catastrophe.

• • • •

THUS BRITAIN is sharpening her sword. Britain is extending the olive branch. And Britain is passing through an ordeal of inner doubt as to what will come of it all. The British are asking themselves the fundamental question whether in Hitler they are confronted by a mystic who would believe that his mission was achieved if he united all the Germans of Central Europe, or whether he is another Napolean who intends to lead the united Germans to the conquest of world supremacy.

The British parties are divided and individual Britons are divided in their own minds as to which of these two conceptions of Hitler is the true one. The so-called pro-Germans in the British ruling class have decided to act as if they were persuaded that Hitler can satisfy his ambitions in Central Europe and then live at peace with the British Empire. The others believe that Hitler's immediate objectives are only the means to the development of enough power to enable him to destroy the French army and undo the humiliation of Scapa Flow.

• • • •

NEITHER of the two theories can be proved conclusively at the present time. As the British are temperamentally against abstract theories in politics, they are keeping an open if exceedingly anxious mind and they are waiting to see. They are moreover accustomed to ruling in human affairs and this means that they do not take their facts at second hand. So they will form their final estimate of Hitler not from his enemies nor even from his propogandists nor even from Hitler's own words but from Hitler's own acts.

From the citadel of their armaments and of their French alliance they will try to reach an agreement with him that German ideals are to be pursued without further violence, and they will not conclude that Hitler is their moral enemy unless by his own direct actions he forces them to reach that conclusion.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Interview At Sea.

Mr. Roosevelt:
Oh, should I run another time?
Should three terms be my wish?
I ask you, for they say no one
Sees further than a fish.
You have not much repute for brains—
You've mostly bones and flesh;
Yet such opinions as you have
I know are strictly fresh.

The Fish:
I wouldn't know, I wouldn't know
The answer. Mister, lemme go!

Mr. Roosevelt:
Some friends declare I ought to run—
Cast precedent aside;
They say my popularity
Is very high and wide.
I do not like to talk of it—
It seems poor strategy,
But out here I can talk to you
And you can talk to me.

The Fish:
I only know I am in pain—
Free me, and I'll NOT run again!

Mr. Roosevelt:
No President has ever run
For three terms heretofore,
Successively, I mean to say,
Though they have wanted more.
I crave to get some sound advice
To show me what to do;
In asking you I simply seek
To get a novel view.

The Fish:
The weather is so very hot,
I pray don't put me on the spot.

Mr. Roosevelt:
Traditions are not much today—
Results are in demand;
You are not bound by any ties,
You're free to show your hand.
In asking you I do not hold
Your views to be so sound . . .
It's just because I know this talk
Will not get noised around.

The Fish:
There are vast others in the sea—
Now why, oh, why, sir, pick on me?

Mr. Roosevelt:
Just judge me as a fisherman—
The Presidential kind—
How do those other Presidents
Compare within your mind?
Comparisons you must have made—
They've all fished more or less;
Have I impressed you more than they?
Come on, now, fish, confess!

The Fish:
If I would e'er again be free,
I'd better say, "Why, certainly!"

Mr. Roosevelt:
That's spoken like a noble fish;
It was no mere surmise
To think you'd say so, for I saw
Great wisdom in your eyes.
I had to talk with someone, and
It might as well be you;
So go, my friend, and run again—
I think I'll do it, too!

Shake Well Before Using.

New York bars are introducing cocktails. We understand the best one is prepared as follows:

1. Take all the contemplated ingredients and put them in a shaker on your right.
2. Add a jigger of brandy.
3. Shake well.
4. Ignore the concoction entirely and serve a drink from a shaker unexpectedly placed at your left and containing Irish whisky and the juice of wild hops.

One drink, they tell us, and you can't see ahead because of the location of the tanks.

800-Year-Old Struggle

By Mark Sullivan.

Earle Vs. The Courts.

NEXT Monday, in Pennsylvania, there will come to climax a battle in which the issue goes back more than 800 years. It is a battle over a right so long ago fought for and won that during many generations it has been taken for granted. Because this right has so long been taken for granted, it is difficult for the people to realize it is again brought into question. Because of this state of mind, few realize the nature of the struggle going on between the Governor of Pennsylvania and the courts of the State.

The issue arose as an incident of the Democratic primary in Pennsylvania last April. A candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor made charges against Gov. Earle and persons associated with him in leadership of the Democratic organization. The man who made the charges was one of Mr. Earle's cabinet—the attorney general of the State—Charles J. Margiotti, who had been appointed to his office by Gov. Earle himself. The charges made by Mr. Margiotti and others can be summarized as follows:

That certain sums were collected from various interests for favorable legislation; that commissions were collected from firms selling supplies to the State and contractors doing business with the State; that some $2,000,000 annually was collected from State employes.

• • • •

AS SOON AS Attorney General Margiotti made his charges, Gov. Earle dismissed him from his office and appointed a new attorney general.

Notice was taken of the charges by the court of Dauphin County, in which the State Capitol is located. The prosecuting attorney of the county asked the county court to convene a grand jury to investigate. The court called a grand jury to meet May 11.

At once Gov. Earle and his new attorney general began a campaign to prevent action by the court and grand jury. They went before the supreme court of the State asking it to prohibit action by the Dauphin County court. The supreme court, after hearing, held that the Dauphin County court and grand jury were acting properly.

Then Gov. Earle asked the court to direct that the conduct of the case be taken out of the hands of the Dauphin County prosecuting attorney and be entrusted to the new attorney general of the State (Gov. Earle's appointee) or a subordinate named by him. The court refused.

• • • •

ACCOMPANYING this legal campaign, Gov. Earle carried on a newspaper and radio campaign of denunciation against the Dauphin County court and the grand jury. Later he extended his denunciation to the supreme court of the State. Among other things he asserted that the judges of the Dauphin County Court were Republicans and prejudiced. Thereupon Dauphin County judges withdrew from the case and asked the supreme court to appoint another judge. The court appointed another judge, a Democrat, from another county, Judge Paul N. Schaeffer. Because Gov. Earle had publicly impugned the grand jury that had been called for May 11, Judge Schaeffer called a new grand jury to sit August 8—next Monday.

When it was clear that the case in the courts would go on, Gov. Earle called a special session of the Legislature for July 25. The Legislature, having a Democratic majority, acting hurriedly and denying all requests for public hearings, passed four measures. I do not have the full text of the measures before me; I summarize them from newspaper condensations. The effect of the measures is to suspend the grand jury investigation and set up a legislative committee to investigate the charges.

• • • •

FACED BY this action of the Legislature, Judge Schaeffer is going on with his judicial function. "In order to prevent interference with orderly administration of the law by this court and its grand jury," he has ordered that all documents, exhibits and other evidence be impounded and be shown to no one except the grand jury. He has ordered that witnesses now under subpena to testify before the grand jury "are hereby directed not to testify" before the legislative investigation.

Next week, presumably, there will be dramatic developments.

Nine out of ten persons will see all this as merely an incident of the political campaign in which Gov. Earle is a candidate for Senator next November. Hardly one out of ten will realize that there is here involved an attempt to trespass upon the powers of the oldest and most fundamental institution of law and justice, the grand jury. To preserve the function of the local grand jury, as against encroachment by the crown or other authority, much blood was shed in the times when people felt that their rights and liberties were worth fighting for.

Powder Barrel

By Barnet Nover

The Russo-Japanese Conflict.

IT IS ALWAYS dangerous to play with fire, particularly in the vicinity of a powder barrel.

That is why the clashes which have occurred almost daily since July 15 between Japanese and Russian troops along the disputed borderline which divides Korea, Manchukuo and Soviet Siberia are so fraught with ominous possibilities. For the whole of northeastern Asia is a powder barrel which both Japan and Russia have long been filling with combustibles.

Yet, despite the increasingly martial language of the communiques emanating from Moscow and Tokyo, despite actual hostilities at Changkufeng and nearby points, and despite the circumstances that for years both the Soviet Union and Japan have been preparing for a knock-down and drag-out fight between them, the odds at the moment are against a major Russo-Japanese war.

• • • •

THE OLD PROVERB is false. It takes not two but one to make war. But it takes two to make peace. That is why during the past few years Russia and Japan while not actually at war have also not been at peace. A sort of uneasy truce has obtained between them with each side taking it for granted that some fine day war would break out between them. Yet neither side has been willing to begin that war.

So far as Russia is concerned her attitude until now has been a defensive one. The Soviet Union retreated steadily in the face of Japanese pressure in Manchuria beginning in 1931. The valuable Chinese eastern railway was given up for a song. Again and again Moscow pressed Tokyo to conclud a non-aggression pact. Japan refused.

This refusal intensified Russian suspicion that Japan harbored designs on Soviet territory. In 1904 and 1905, it was recalled, the battle cry of the Japanese was "on to Baikal!" In 1918 Japan actually tried to take possession of Siberian territory. On the pretext that the Czechoslovak legion making its way from European Russia to the Pacific needed protection against the Bolsheviks, Japan and other powers sent troops into eastern Siberia. The Czechoslovaks were strung along the Trans-Siberian railway. Yet oddly enough Japanese contingents managed to get as far north as Nikolaevsk, at the mouth of the Amur.

• • • •

THE JAPANESE, for their part, remembered that their troops had had a very bad time in Siberia. The Reds, of course, did not like them. But they were also disliked and harassed by guerrillas who were not Reds. Siberia, they discovered, was no easy nut to crack.

Possibly they might have cracked it in 1931. But instead Manchuria became the object of Japan's intentions and Russia was let alone. Since then, however, the Soviet government has steadily increased its defenses in Siberia. The Trans-Siberian Railway has been double-tracked; a new line north of Baikal has been started; Soviet icebreakers have opened the ice-clogged channel from Archangel to Vladivostok; and a well-supplied army of hundreds of thousands of men equipped with the latest appliances of war has been garrisoned in the region east of Baikal. What is more, a large air fleet has been assembled there and is not too great striking distance of Japan.

• • • •

ALL THESE developments have given the Japanese pause. But it is doubtful if they have led to the complete abandonment of the idea of making Eastern Siberia, or at least the maritime province, Japanese and thus of transforming the Sea of Japan into a Japanese lake. For in the eyes of many Japanese army leaders, such a development is necessary for defensive purposes as well as for the addition of territory of great potential value. With Russia in Eastern Asia Japan is never likely to feel that her islands and her possessions are safe against attack.

That is why throughout the course of the present undeclared war on China th very best Japanese troops to the number of 300,000 to 400,000, have been kept in Manchukuo. That is why, during the past seven years, a series of strategic railways have been built in Manchukuo to the Siberian border. One crosses the Changpei Range and connects with the port of Rashin in Korea. Another goes to Heiho, on the Amur, on the other side of the Siberian town of Blagovestchensk. Still another touches the Siberian border at Hulin.

• • • •

WHILE ALL these preparations give Japan an excellent defensive position in Manchukuo, it is doubtful if they permit her to wage offensive war on the Soviet Union. As long as Outer Mongolia is Russian-controlled territory, as is the case today, it would be impossible for the Japanese to cut off Eastern Siberia at Lake Baikal by seizing the Trans-Siberian road at the point where it touches that great lake. A simpler line of attack would be to invade Siberia at Habarovsk and push on to the sea, cutting off the maritime province and Vladivostok. But that, too, is easier said than done, in view of the tremendous army Russia has assembled in eastern Siberia. Simplest of all, Japan might try to make itself master of the pocket of land in which Vladivostok is located. While that would not mean the immediate elimination of Russia from the Far East, it would at least deprive Russia of her one important Pacific port, and thus would prevent the development of a Russian fleet in Pacific waters.

The importance of the fighting at Changkufeng lies in the strategic importance of that region in relation to the defense of Vladivostok. But the very circumstance that for three weeks the fighting has been limited there and has not spread to other points along the extensive border dividing Soviet Russia from Japanese controlled territory shows that neither side wants the struggle to spread. It would be suicidal for Japan to take on Russia at this time. But Russia, too, has little to gain by a major war. Strong as is her defensive position in Siberia, her ability to take the offensive is distinctly limited. That is why the fighting at Changkufeng, fierce though it may have been and inyolving, though it does, that most explosive of all intangibles—national prestige—will probably not spread beyond its present narrow confines.

Mothers Advised On Baby Care in Traveling by Air

By the Associated Press.

"Infant Care," Uncle Sam's best-seller, spanned the era between horse and buggy and modern air travel yesterday.

The book, which has gone into 10,000,000 American homes underwent its first major revision since 1929. The Children's Bureau casually included the airplane in advising mothers on "traveling with the baby."

Old-timers in the bureau recalled that "The Care of the Horse" was the Government's best seller when "Infant Care" appeared in 1914. The new book immediately broke all distribution records. More than 500,000 copies are being sold annually.

Murder

trunk, Dwyer said, he went directly to the Littlefield home.

He told Mrs. Littlefield, he said, that the doctor had run over two men and wanted to meet her in Boston. Littlefield sent him to drive her to her husband, Dwyer said he told Mrs. Littlefield. Mrs. Littlefield joined him, Dwyer testified, and they set out for Boston. That was the night of last October 13, only a few hours after Carroll allegedly kicked, bludgeoned and finally garroted the doctor.

En route they became lost and arrived in Concord, N. H., where they took hotel rooms under assumed names, Dwyer said. Next day, he continued, he told Mrs. Littlefield that he had talked with the doctor and arranged to meet him in New Hampshire.

Got Lost Again.

They set out for Manchester, N. H., Dwyer said, but again became lost and arrived in Somerville, Mass.

In Somerville, Dwyer said, he broke down and told Mrs. Littlefield that her husband had been slain by Carroll. They decided to return to South Paris and confront Carroll, he said.

Arriving in South Paris shortly after midnight the morning of October 15, Dwyer said, they drew abreast of Carroll's house just as he was leaving in his own automobile.

"I followed him," Dwyer said under cross-examination by Defense Attorney Clyde R. Chapman. "In front of Perley Ripley's house on High street, I drove up beside him."

"Hit Her Over the Head."

"How did you attract his attention?" demanded Chapman.

"I honked the horn and he stopped. Mrs. Littlefield started to get out of her car and Carroll started to get out of hers.

"Someone had a gun. I don't know who it was, but it finally landed in Carroll's hands and he hit her over the head and pushed her back on the front seat. He climbed into the back seat and told me to drive to Turkey Hill."

"Where were you?" asked Chapman.

"I was in the driver's seat. We stopped on Prospect avenue. It was there that Mrs. Littlefield was killed."

"Where were you?"

"I was sitting in the driver's seat. Mrs. Littlefield was beside me and Carroll was standing outside the car. He reached in and strangled her with his hands."

Mind Went Blank.

Dwyer testified that he "did not watch" Carroll strangle the woman.

"I don't know what happened after that," he said. "My mind was practically a blank."

After Mrs. Littlefield was murdered, Dwyer said, he started off in the automobile for Boston. He did not mention whether he talked with Carroll first.

"Well, you finally landed in New Jersey, pretty tired. Why did you park at the side of the road? Were you excited?" asked Chapman.

"Excited and very tired."

Dwyer was arrested at North Arlington, N. J., by a policeman who thought Dwyer's shabby clothing in strange contrast to the new 1937 Buick sedan the boy was driving.

Investigation disclosed the body of Dr. Littlefield stuffed in the trunk and that of Mrs. Littlefield hidden beneath luggage and a blanket in the tonneau.

Confessed to Come Back.

"There in the station, did you have in mind what to do?" asked Chapman.

"Well, I confessed to the crimes so that I could come back to Maine. I don't remember what I told them."

Dwyer said he told the "true" story of the murder to his attorney prior to the trial, but later declared there "was nothing to it."

After entering State prison, Dwyer said, he repeated the "true" story of the murder to Attorney General Frank U. Burkett, Special Assistant Attorney General Ralph M. Ingalls, Warden John H. Welch, Sheriff Fernando Francis and "a number of others."

Carroll, who is being tried only for the murder of Dr. Littlefield, sat directly in front of Dwyer, his head cocked slightly to one side. He hardly shifted his position during the whole testimony. A 43-year-old World War veteran, he was ousted as a deputy sheriff shortly after he was linked to the murders in May.

Love Gets The Blame.

It was Dwyer's love affair with the daughter Barbara, a comely 17-year-old brunette, that indirectly motivated the slaying of Dr. Littlefield, according to the State.

Dwyer testified that he brought Dr. Littlefield to the Dwyer home the night of the murder to examine Barbara after Carroll had accused him of getting her "in trouble."

The youth declared that he had informed the doctor that Barbara already had confided to him that her father once had violated her, and when Carroll entered the house that night, Dr. Littlefield threatened to expose him as the seducer of his own daughter and send him to State prison. Carroll then killed the doctor and agreed to spare Dwyer's life only when the boy promised to dispose of the doctor's body, he testified.

Dwyer declared he still loved Barbara and never had "kept company" with any other girl.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Blind U. S. Girl Guided by Dog Asks King for Entry to Britain

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 3.—Intervention by King George himself appeared tonight to be the only means by which Hazel Hurst, 22-year-old blind American, could enter England with the dog which guides her. Miss Hurst wired the King an appeal to intervene in her behalf. She previously had cabled President Roosevelt for help.

Miss Hurst had planned to spend two months visiting relatives in England and lecturing on the use of dogs as guides for the blind. But she remained on her ship, docked in East London, refusing to land without her dog, declining an offer of a British dog guide, and turning down the offer of a one-eyed man to have his good eye transplanted to her by surgery.

The ministry of agriculture, which refused to grant an entry permit to Miss Hurst's dog, tonight stated "regretfully" that it was impossible to waive usual regulations in Miss Hurst's case.

However, the newspaper News Chronicle commented:

"What seems to have escaped attention is that the law regarding the importation of dogs provides for quarantine except in the case of performing dogs, exhibition and breeding dogs or dogs imported for other special purposes.

"Could not guidance of the blind be considered a special purpose?"

Medical League Plans Own Case Against Society

Health

lief from the medical society's practices.

"Therefore we plan to press the fight, asking Attorney General Cummings to initiate quo warranto proceedings against the society. Possibly an injunction can be obtained to make it cease harassing G. H. A."

To Write Cummings.

The league's secretary-treasurer said a letter of complaint will be sent immediately to Cummings covering essentially the same points which were emphasized in the letter to U. S. Attorney David A. Pine last week. Pine is now on vacation.

The communication charged:

That the District Medical Society has gone and is going far beyond the authorization of the charter granted by Congress, which states that the society is incorporated "for the purpose of promoting and disseminating medical and surgical knowledge, and for no other purpose."

That the society effectively boycotts members who have any professional relations with G. H. A. physicians.

That exclusion of nonconformists from use of hospital operating rooms and like facilities "deprives them of what is in fact indispensable for a successful operation."

Insurance No Panacea.

The current issue of the Annals of the District Medical Society contains an article by Dr. A. C. Christie, a past president of the society, urging his organization to pursue a "constructive course" which will not "interfere with medical progress or lower the quality of medical care."

Health insurance, he said, offers no panacea.

"It is our conviction that the value of health insurance has been greatly exaggerated and its potential evils minimized. At its best it offers only very limited help in the total problem of medical care and prevention of disease," he said.

Dr. Christie is a member of the society's medical economics committee, of which Dr. Arch L. Riddick is chairman, which is now making a study of a limited indemnity type of health insurance applicable to the Capital. Dr. Riddick declined yesterday to discuss details of the plan.

In the medical co-operative league delegation that called upon Acting District Attorney Underwood, besides REA Administrator Carmody, were Jacob Baker, president of United Federal Workers; Mae Schnurr, Interior Department; Col. Henry T. Hunt, the league's chief counsel; F. O. Billings, executive secretary of the league, and Edwards. Mary Anderson, head of the Women's Bureau and who was scheduled to appear, could not be present.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Haft.

Solid Front.

We hope that on next Wednesday night, when Guest Conductor Willem Van Hoogstraten, waves his baton before the splendid National Symphony Orchestra, that the first strain will be "I Love You Truly." This isn't sentiment—there is a hard, factual reason.

You should know that this concert has been designated "Labor Department Night" and to make it a success all three belligerently opposing Federal employe unions have cooperated.

From the official program we read: "Tickets available in Room 3113 (Mrs. Henderson), or from officers of the following employe organizations: National Federation of Federal Employes, Local 12, United Federal Employes of America; Lodge 228, American Federation of Government Employes."

All true friends of labor will rejoice that they have made a solid front on one thing at least, and if the one thing is music, the opening selection should, in all appropriateness, signalize the event. So more power to music, which long has had the reputation of quieting the troubled breast.

And it may be that some genius will arise to write a march that will send them Tipperarying in solid formation to fight as one for the many job improvements Federal employes desire and need.

"Three of the men, employed as Japanese beetle scouts by the United States Department of Agriculture, were struck (by lightning) as they rode in a Government near Ironshire."—From an out-of-town paper. It's nothing but anti-New Deal propaganda, calculated to show that everybody is riding the Government!"

There is every prospect that the Civil Service Commission will have the final say on what positions are to be excluded from civily service provisions under the Executive Order of June 24. Actually, the President is supposed to say the final word, but the realities are in favor of the commission saying it.

Commissioner Mitchell has stated: "We have asked the departments for a statement of the number of positions now outside the purview of the civil service laws, and what they think should continue to be outside those laws. Then we will consider whether the Civil Service Commission agrees, and will make recommendations to the President. If we don't agree, it is up to the President to make the final decision . . ."

It is unlikely that the President (who has declared his faith in civil service) will do other than what is recommended by the commission. In all conscience, he could scarcely give the time to a study of the individual cases under dispute. And this is another reason why the agency heads should move carefully in any blanketing out of large numbers of workers. The commission is aroused; and we have the feeling that the excluded cases will be studied down to the last man.

Depressed Woman Holds a Match to Gas Tank, Is Hurt

Mrs. Nellie Archer, 54, of 7007 Wisconsin avenue northwest, was severely burned late yesterday when she held a match toward the gasoline tank of an automobile in her back yard.

Police learned the victim had become depressed and, unobserved, had stepped to the yard, where the family car was parked. They were summoned when neighbors heard the explosion.

Pickets, Police Shout 'Lie' at Steel Inquiry

isn't telling the truth."

But out of the confusion of testimony, this sequence of events emerged:

On the night of June 10, 1937, a police squad car, followed by a truck loaded with food, approached the mill at a high rate of speed with lights extinguished. The pickets were taken by surprise, and the truck got into the mill.

Youthful Robert Burke, a C. I. O. organizer, addressed the crowd aroused by the happening. He spoke from steps leading to a bridge over the street, and while he was speaking Ralph Ross, who, the strikers charged, was a "stool pigeon" for the company, ran up the stairs and was shot at the top of them.

Three strikers testified that they heard the shot and almost simultaneously saw a flash from an upstairs window of a Republic office building.

Charles Richmond, Youngstown police lieutenant, told the committee that before Ross was shot Burke had halted his address to shout "Get that man!" This Burke denied.

Afterward police fired tear gas at the pickets under the bridge, and in the melee which followed two officers were injured, but whether by clubs, rocks or by what, was obscured in the confusion of contradictory evidence.

Sheriff Elser testified, and the pickets vehemently denied, that just before the tear gas was released shots were fired at him.

"The only word I got out of my mouth was 'Disperse!'" he said. "The minute I got that out, bullets began to fly in my direction. There's no argument about it, they were bullets. I heard them click on the bridge over my head. Then my men released the gas."

Geoffrey Burke, father of Robert Burke, the organizer, was one of several who denied Elser's story.

"It's untrue that anyone was asked to disperse or surrender," he said. "They (the pickets) were shot upon (with tear gas) without any warning, and in my opinion, needlessly and uselessly."

Several pickets testified that Ross was suspected of being an informer for the company and that when he was spotted in the crowd, the younger Burke warned him to leave. He ran up the stairs past Burke, the testimony was, while Burke and others held back several pickets who sought to chase him.

Ross was shot in the leg, members of the committee staff said, and later recovered.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't fiddle around with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble!

Chances are it's simple if you eat only what most people do: meat, bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, your ticket is a crisp crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and just watch the old world grow brighter! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

New Pictures And 'Barn' Hits Feature Week

Variegated Amusement Is Promised for Next Seven Days.

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou, George Murphy, Rita Johnson, Eve Arden, Ann Sheridan, Frank Jenks, Ernest Cossart, Jonathan Hale and a long list of others are cast in the principal roles of Universal's production of "Letter of Introduction," opening today at RKO-Keith's Theater. The story is an absorbing one in which comedy and pathos are about equally divided. It is flawlessly played by both principals and subordinate members of the cast. The auxiliary attractions will include a new Walt Disney cartoon comedy, "Polar Trapper," featuring Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck and a new issue of the Pathe News.

Harold Lloyd, after a long absence from the screen, will be the pictured star at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in his latest feature comedy, "Professor Beware," in which the foremost feminine role is taken by Phyllis Welch, a newcomer. Others in the cast include Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn, William Frawley, Cora Witherspoon and Sterling Holloway. The stage portion of the bill will be headlined by Frances Langford, popular singer, in person. Others on the stage will be Eddie White, Galli-Gali, Egyptian prestidigitator; the Three Samuels and Harriet Hayes, dancers, and the Six Antaleks, as a special added attraction.

"Gateway," a screen story with Ellis Island as its chief motivation, will be the film offering at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning tomorrow. Don Ameche and Arleen Whelan are cast in the principal roles, supported by Gilbert Roland, Lyle Talbot, Gregory Ratoff, Binnie Barnes and numerous others. On the stage, the vaudeville bill will be featured by the presence of Jack Powell, premiere syncopationist; Joe and Jane McKenna, kockabout funsters, and a considerable list of other specialists.

Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert will return to the screen at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in a revival of "It Happened One Night," the Academy prize comedy-drama of its season. The film play was adapted from Samuel Hopkins Adams' magazine story of "Night Bus," and was directed by Frank Capra.

So great has been the poular success of "Love Finds Andy Hardy," the most recent Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release in the "Hardy Family" series of domestic comedy-dramas, that it wil be continued a second week as chief feature of the bill at Loew's Palace Theater. The stellar roles are played by Lewis S. Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Cecilia Parker, Ann Rutherford, Fay Holden, Raymond Hatton, Gene Reynolds and many more.

"A Pilgrimage Through Palestine," a travelogue of the Holy Land; a sports featurette, devoted to the game of polo, and a new issue of the "Screen Snapshots," will be the featurd short subjects on the program opening at the Trans-Lux Theater tomorrow. The cartoon comedy for the new week will be Walt Disney's "Thru a Mirror," starring Mickey Mouse.

Shirley Temple will be the pictured star for the week beginning tomorrow at the Columbia Theater in a repeat F street engagement of "Little Miss Broadway," her latest and most diverting Twentieth Century Fox production. The supporting cast is led by George Barbier, Edward Ellis, Phyllis Brooks, Jane Darwell, Donald Meek, Jimmy Durante and El Brendel.

At the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, the chief feature of the program will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of escapade, revived will William Powell and Luise Rainer. It was in this subject that Miss Rainer was introduced to American audiences. A third important member of the cast of this Hungarian romantic comedy is Frank Morgan.

David McWilliams and his newly assembled dance orchestra continue in favor in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park. Another center of interest is the Crystal Pool, one of the best appointed natatoria in the East and a fine weapon with which to fight the heat these muggy days. All of the other 50-odd amusement devices at Glen Echo continue in full, midseason operation, much to the delight of the crowds.

"Kiddies Days" will remain in effect on Monday and Friday of every week through August on the Wilson Line steamer, City of Washington, and at Marshall Hall Park. Special entertainment for the juveniles is provided on these days at reduced rates. Trips are made down the river daily at 10 a. m., 2, 5:30 and 8:30 p. m.

Owing to extension of his current engagement elsewhere, Sammy Kaye and his orchestra will not be aboard the Potomac River Line steamer, Potomac, this Saturday night, but will be heard later in the month. The usual schedules of moonlight cruises and salt water trips to Colonial Beach continue. The next "name" band to be heard aboard the Potomac will be Paul Whiteman's.

George M. Cohan's comedy-melodrama of "The Tavern" will open a two-week run at the Roadside Theater next Monday night. The cast will be headed by Paul Messink, Adele Cusack, Kenn Romney, Milton Freedman, Virginia True, Howard Wierum and other "barn theater" favorites.

At the Cross Roads Theater next week, the attraction will be Owen Davis' melodrama of "The Ninth Guest," interpreted by a stellar cast of "hayloft" players. Tickets for the Cross Roads now ate on sale at the A. A. A. office, Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, northwest.

Beginning next Monday night at the new Olney Theater, out Georgia avenue between Olney and Ashton, Md., "Personal Appearance" will be the bill, with Dorothy Mackaill in the stellar role. Supporting parts will be assumed by Mr. Cochran's resident company of professional players. Matinees are given at the Olney on Thursday and Saturday of each week.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

More Than Beauty Is Required To Win Modern 'Beauty Contest'

Contestants for 'Miss Washington' and 'Miss America' Titles Also Must Have Ability as Entertainers; Concerning 'Letter of Introduction;' Notes of Theater.

WELL—and this will prabably occasion you deep disappointment—we all got back alive.

I mean from the river junket during which the "Miss Washington" judging was done aboard the Wilson Line's steamer City of Washington, Tuesday night. There were a few ominous murmurings on the dance deck where the selection was made, but none of the judges was dropped quietly overboard to end at least a fragment of the suffering that was going on. It might have been cooler, at that, the temperature and humidity being what they were on the lower deck.

BELL.

The winner, as everyone knows by now, was Dorothy Parker, vivacious, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Parker, of 1228 Shepherd street northwest, who already had been crowned "Miss Columbia Heights" in an earlier competition. Miss Parker, it should be known, had no easy walkaway. The final ballot left only a hairline margin between the winner and the runnerup, Nadine Petrey, also a recent contest winner. Tony Mann was third.

There is more than any mere matter of personal beauty of face and figure involved in these preliminaries to the "Miss America" contest, held in Atlantic City each Labor Day week. There are the considerations of poise, bearing, entertainment ability and other things to be taken into account, for the later judging at the shore stresses all of these qualifications.

I recall an occasion, some two or three years ago, when I sat in at the final judging of "Miss America" on the Steel Pier, in company with Leo Carrillo. McClelland Barclay and James Montgomery Flagg, among several others of equal note, were sitting in judgment that night and it was no child's play for the contestants. Some of them were called back as many as three or four times to sing their songs, do their dances, or whatever it was they did, the matter of their appearance long since having been disposed of. Their stage deportment before a large audience became really the deciding factor in the final decision as to which should be "Miss America." In modified degree, much the same condition prevailed Tuesday night.

While the judges held no secret confabs in an effort to arrive at a unanimous verdict, there must have been an almost unique unanimity of opinion among them, since no second ballots were necessary either in the eliminations or the final vote.

The judges, by the way, were relieved of a portion of their responsibilities in the eliminations by the last-minute discovery by those in charge that some of the competitors for the title had failed to qualify under the contest rules, although they had survived all of the preliminaries that had been going on for three or four weeks. They were ignored in the voting.

Al Stern, major domo of the proceedings, and Harry Baker, manager of the Wilson Line, serving as co-masters of ceremonies for the evening, ran the contest off smoothly and humorously, and Mrs. Mason Peters, jr., the "Miss Washington of 1937," microphoned a friendly warning to the girls of what they would be up against once they arrive by the glad sea waves for the national finals. That will be plenty!

• • • •

A picture pretty tightly packed with what is usually referred to as "audience appeal" will be coming along to the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater this morning. That will be "Letter of Introduction," previewed yesterday afternoon by a full quota of the drama desks, who had a very elegant time watching Charlie McCarthy qualify for screen stardom. Edgar Bergen's fabulous blockhead plays a real part in this Universal comedy-drama—as does Mr. Bergen, too, of course—and encounters a bit of keen rivalry from Mortimer, a new hack-sawed creation of Mr. Bergen's, who possesses a bucolic sense of humor that will knock you for a row of cornstalks.

In the major movement of the story, participated in by Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou, Ann Sheridan, George Murphy, et al, there is a vague suggestion of the general outline of "Stage Door," something the flavor of "Sing, Baby, Sing" and a nebulous sort of reminder of "The Royal Family."

Don't wait for tomorrow's formal review of "Letter of Introduction," see it today while you can still get a seat!

• • • •

After two nights of long and painstaking auditions, the Loew executives in charge of the "Going Native" revue, to be staged in the Capitol Theater late this month, are of the unanimous opinion that never before in the five years' history of this all-Washington production has such a wealth of resident talent presented itself as this year. Although before leaving for New York, Chester Hale, famous dance director, had selected a list of applicants from which the chorus and "line girls" will be chosen, Carter Barron, Gene Ford, Howard Burkhardt and the others in charge are faced with a colossal task in picking the principals for the revue.

The difficulty is one of overabundance of material rather than any paucity of gifted eligibles. It will be a knotty problem to determine whom and what to drop. It would almost be possible to put on a new revue every day, each one peopled by a different cast, so great has been the response of the Capital's aspirants for stage recognition.

Mr. Ford also has returned temporarily to New York, but will be back some time today and immediately go into a huddle with the others on the matter of final selections. As soon as their decisions have been reached, personnel of the cast and rehearsal dates will be made known.

Dorothy Mackaill, star of the "Personal Appearance" production at Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater next week, arrived in Washington on Tuesday and is busy rehearsing the piece with the supporting players. Miss Mackaill's last personal appearance here was on the stage of the Rialto Theater several years ago, when she headlined for a week. She had the distinction, earlier, of playing opposite Richard Barthelmess in a greater number of silent pictures than any other leading woman, beginning with "The Fighting Blade," a drama of the Cromwellian period.

• • • •

As this is written, late Wednesday afternoon, Margaret Sullavan, recently seen in "Three Comrades" and "Shopworn Angel," and a likely prospect for the role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind"—when, as and if—is expected to arrive in Washington any minute and stop off for two or three hours. If she makes it, more of this later.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Aug. 3.

"Thanks For the Memory," which I start today at Paramount Studio, with Bob Hope, Charlie Butterworth, Shirley Ross and Roscoe Karn, puts me back in double harness and is giving me a chance to brush up on my acting.

HEDDA HOPPER

Thanks to Harold Hurley, producer, who remembered I was an actress before a columnist. Maybe I still am. He offered me a job once to teach newcomers how to sit, walk, pose, relax, dress their style, bringing out their best and conceal their worst features. Also thanks to George Archainbaud, director, who remembered the time I didn't let him down at bridge.

Thanks also to Freddie Schuesler for being my guest and keeping jitterbugs away on my first radio program. Charles Butterworth for mixing laughs with food. Ditto Bob Hope, but he hasn't fed me yet. How about lunch tomorrow, Bob? And to Frank Richardson, head of the studio wardrobe department, who loaned me royal robes, which got me the prize at a fancy dress charity ball in San Francisco. I wouldn't fool you—a mask, covering my whole face helped, too. And designer, Edith Head, hopping on her first trip to Paris. Don't miss the races, Edie. You're sure to find copies of your clothes there.

Paris designers copied our willow plumes and spangles for Mae West's last picture. There's a story about that. The French, being cautious, wanted Mae's exact measurements. So Mae sent a copy of her nude statue to Paris for fittings, but when the dresses arrived here they didn't meet by about 6 inches. Speaking of fashions, have you noticed how Mrs. Roosevelt has smartened up lately?

And for those glamour girls, who want to look 16 with hair flowing down their back for tennis and other sports—yet comb it up off their neck, with curls piled high on the head at night—you must know it can't be done with the same cut. It must be thinned out and shortened, otherwise the back of your head will look as though you were wearing a bustle in it. And if you want to wear the new hats, you've got to have it up. Don't be fooled by this first shipment of pill boxes, which are like the old Empress Eugene fad a few years back. In one month you could buy the finest copy for $1.98, which finished that style.

Did you know motion pictures were 50 years old? The first one was made as a gag, by an employe of Thomas Edison named Ott, to amuse Edison on his return from Europe. But unlike a golden wedding anniversary, where the people who've proved themselves receive gifts, the picture business still is handing out presents trying to snare customers into their houses. Isn't it about time we grew up and acted our age? Some have. I don't hear any howls from Zanuck or his company. Their profits for half of this year were $3,500,000. Maybe other boys should learn to ride ponies instead of betting on them.

The Post's New Yorker

New York, Aug. 3.

WHENEVER THE BROADWAY sportsmen assemble they still speak, in reverent whispers, of the coups accredited to Arnold Rothstein. Lindy's is the favorite gathering spot for the nocturnal chatter of the gamblers . . . And at the cashier's desk, sits a dark, quiet man, pointed out to the uninitiated as the first man to receive a tip from the notoriously tight Rothstein. His name is Harry Schneider. Through his fingers passed the pay-off checks he cashed for the gambler whose death still is marked unsolved on the police blotter . . . "Here's the $300 I took from you yesterday," Rothstein told him on that memorable summer evening in 1919, when he was to be inducted into the tipping gentry. Schneider accepted the new bills and placed them in the register.

• • • •

AN HOUR LATER ARNOLD asked him to cash a $500 check. The cashier proffered, in part, the same three bills he had received from him, and discovered that one of them—instead of being a $100 note—was a $500 one. "You overpaid me before, Mr. Rothstein," he corrected . . . The gambler was stricken with a sentiment of appreciation. "For being so honest," he told Schneider, "I'm going to reward you. You've got a $50 bet riding with me—even money. You," said Rothstein—who never dispelled the accusation that he had framed that World Series into Cincinnati's winning, "have 50 bucks riding—on the White Sox!"

HARPO MARX had been on the stage all his life, and so now he is permitting himself one long-awaited luxury. He has a private office in the New Amsterdam Theater Building. The office boasts only a desk, chair and name-on-the-door. All this, because Harpo wants to know how a businessman feels. Most of the offices in the building are occupied by booking agents. Harpo has them crazy, for twice daily he hops in and out of their offices, uses a fictitious name, and pleads for a job. "But what kind of an actor are you?" they all inquire . . . His reply has them baffled, for they never heard of that classification. They know of the gangster-type, juvenile, crooner or Shakespearean—but not of "a nondescript!"

GENE SARAZEN went to the Ridgewood Country Club during the Ryder Cup matches. He decided to kid the English team. "You don't know how to play golf," he told Capt. Roe, who was in charge of the English contingent. "Your men use the wrong clubs and don't know anything about approach shots or putting. You'll never lick us. Just what has your team got?" Capt. Roe clicked his heels and replied quietly, "Ten gentlemen . . ."

SIX MONTHS AGO a radio singer borrowed $600 from Goodman Ace and Jack Benny. They heard nothing from him until Ace received a letter Friday, containing only a clipping which blazoned that the singer was yowing 'em in Chicago . . . Goodman tore the clipping in two, and sent one-half to Benny, with the notation: "This is your share!"

DEEMS TAYLOR asked a mutual friend to show his new operatic score to Toscanini just before the maestro's departure for Italy. At an opportune moment the score was exhibited—but Toscanini merely glanced at one page and put it down without any comment . . . This sad news was relayed to Taylor. "I still have the score," his friend said. "What shall I do with it?" . . . The disappointed composer replied: "Don't you know? . . ."

Pets Take Spotlight At Park View Center

A Ringer for Donald Duck

The Most Popular of All Pets

2 A pet show without numerous dogs and cats cannot be called a pet show. At Park View Playground the dogs included the pet of Paul Frederick, 10. Very proud of her twin cats which do not seem to mind their canine neighbor is Shirley Frederick, 8.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Would Girl Be Fool to Marry Man Who, While Completely Devoted, Criticizes Everything About Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For too many years I have had one man friend, and we have hoped to marry in the dim distant future. There is no financial drawback. It's just that almost every word I utter is the wrong one for the occasion; and everything I do is likewise out of order. I walk wrong, sit wrong, stand wrong. I'm too friendly with old friends and new. I have no style, no class, and my opinions are the most asinine—and he grasps every opportunity to make the fact known.

* * * *

During our long friendship I have hoped that he would decide, eventually, that my case was hopeless, and thereafter either walk out on me or endure my shortcomings without further comment. My friends have practically deserted me because he is so silent and aloof in their company. He doesn't like many people and, so far as I can ascertain, has no close friends. He cares nothing for recreations, amusements or pastimes. I seem to be the only thing he does care for. And he DOES love me, or else is puffed up over the fact that he is creating a new personality, and wants to spend the remainder of his life on the task. He wants to spend every spare minute with me—and me alone. There must be no other person or couple with us at any time.

* * * *

He has an excellent position and could keep me "in the style to which I wish to become accustomed." He wants to marry me now, and has wanted to for a long time. I often wish I had married him before I learned so much about his peculiar personality. But now I think I would be a fool to marry him. Miss Haworth, I personally, think there is nothing wrong with me. All of us have faults and all of us try to overcome as many of them as possible.

* * * *

When very young I cultivated a pleasant disposition, and am inherently kind. My family was highly respected and well loved. I have a high school education and have tried to improve myself as the years go by. I have no business affiliations since I have an income sufficient to my needs. There are many who need the position I might fill, and I keep busy helping those who need a boost now and then. Please criticize me all you like, along with your advice. And if you think I would be happier married to this perfectionist, I'll marry him next week. STIFLED.

Avoid the Porcupine.

DEAR STIFLED: I don't think any girl should marry a man who doesn't entertain and generously express, the conviction that she is the personification of every essential womanly grace—of mind, manner and spirit. If a man doesn't fondly admire, appreciate and cherish the personality, appearance and deportment of his sweetheart during courting days, it isn't likely that the nature and manifestation of his devotion will undergo a miraculous change for the better after marriage. On the contrary, what has been a trickling stream of derogatory comment before marriage is apt to become a constant, torrential, insupportable outpouring of cruelly savage criticism and condemnation afterward.

* * * *

I suspect that envy, jealousy, fear and self-distrust (in short, all those negative social attitudes which go to make up what is currently known as an "inferiority complex") are at the bottom of your beau's attitude toward you. The introvert, afflicted with an unadmitted sense of personal inferiority and social inadequacy, almost invariably tries to build himself up by the expedient of tearing down the other fellow. He becomes a carping critic of everybody and nearly everything. He tries to assuage his feeling of inadequacy and inferiority by attempting to persuade himself, and any listener, that he is 100 per cent all right, and everybody else is at least 99 per cent all wrong.

* * * *

In marrying this man, you would, in my opinion, be harnessing yourself to a man who is, rather obviously, a ripe subject for psychoanalytic treatment; yet a man who is probably too stubborn ever to admit it and avail himself of it. In his secret heart, he probably knows how attractive you are, just as nature and normal social upbringing made you—and his efforts to change you are no doubt an attempt to cloak you in a protective coloration of unattractiveness, so as to obviate the possibility of losing you to some other man of more wholesome temperament. Because he dare not invite the bustling challenge of social competition, he tries more and more to cut you out, so to speak, from the crowd.

* * * *

In tolerating his rudeness and humoring his idiosyncrasies for "too many years," in sacrificing the companionship of kindlier friends for his churlish society, in forswearing "recreations, amusements and pastimes" because he doesn't care for them, you have been twisting your personality out of joint in a mistaken attempt to win the approval of a man whose approval would never be forthcoming no matter what you did.

* * * *

Instead of marrying him, I advise you to bring him up short, in the matter of nagging criticism and in the matter of presuming to dictate your personal behavior and social life. Tell him what you have said here—that all of us have faults and all of us try to overcome as many of them as possible. Review, in dispassionate but exact detail, some of his faults of a minor and major caliber.

* * * *

Tell him unless and until he can behave in more seemly fashion, not only toward you, but toward your mutual friends; unless and until he can join you in normal and wholesome participation in the social life of your intimates and contemporaries; until he can find it possible to act, in all ways, more like a human being than a porcupine, you would rather not see him any more. Then suit your actions to your words. As you value your happiness, don't continue to tolerate a situation which amounts to that of a person of normal proportions attempting to compress himself into the mold of a dwarf. M. H.

AFTER being a Southern belle or a Tyrolean peasant all summer, you'll want to look very different in your first fall outfit. Above are some pertinent suggestions. The unusual cone shaped hat is of narrow strips of black suede interwoven to form not only the hat but the hat pin and ornaments as well. A wisp of a veil softens the severe line. The black crepe dress has a draped effect at the shoulders and a heavy gold chain at the neckline. Accessories include long black suede gloves and an all-black suede bag.

Sweet Drinks, Food Trimmings Add Pounds in Hot Weather

Too Much Water With Meals Is Fattening; Watch Sugar in Your Ice Tea and Take Fruit for Dessert.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHEN the hot weather came along and took away your appetite you expected to lose weight—and to your chagrin you may find the scales just where they were, or even up a bit. The trouble with your weight is that you exert yourself as little as possible because of the weather, and you get many more calories than you imagine in spite of it.

It is astonishingly easy to get 1,000 calories in which you might suppose was a "light" luncheon—nothing but a salad, buttered rolls, a sweetened beverage and ice cream. The essentials in that meal are not high in calories, but the trimming, the mayonnaise, butter, cream and sugar contain several hundred calories you may not have counted on.

Butter Adds Calories.

One pat of butter contains 100 calories, one level tablespoon of butter another 100, and sweet drinks contain at least 100 calories per glass, while the cream and sugar on summer fruits and berries add innumerable calories to the day's menu. When you really begin figuring you can see that it would be easy to get the 1,000 calories a day in trimmings alone, especially if the rest of your meals are anything like that supposedly light luncheon. A much more slimming luncheon menu would contain the same essentials, but with a great difference in the trimmings. You would take reducer's mayonnaise on the salad, crackers instead of rolls and fruit instead of ice cream.

This rule of taking fruit, without sugar or cream, for dessert is one that will really help you in your plans to lose weight during the hot weather. Desserts usually add from 300 to 500 calories to the meal, but you could not possibly get more than 100 calories in any one of the following: cantaloupe, honeydew melon, watermelon, fruit ice or fresh fruits of any kind—so long as you leave off the cream and sugar.

Sweet Drinks Fattening.

Another rule you may have let slip your mind, and which is important to your weight reduction, is the one about taking liquids with meals. Two glasses of iced tea with your luncheon is just one too many. Nor should you drink large quantities of water just before or just after eating. Taken with food all liquid has a tendency to remain longer in the stomach and to stretch that organ.

You should, of course, take plenty of liquid between meals. It is even a good idea to have a glass of fruit juice in the midafternoon to prevent the feeling of depression which occurs more often in the hot weather.

You do eat less in the summer, and if you will be consistent in watching the small accessories to the meal and in observing the dietary rules, you can still lose 10 pounds between now and Labor Day—and without too much deprivation.

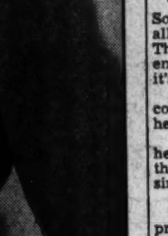
A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 3.

A FEW days ago, meditating and praying at my desk, I heard loud hammering from the kitchen, and when I bustled out to seek the cause, I found the elderly spouse busily pounding together the pieces of an old orange crate. "Whatever now?" I asked, as this manual labor is quite foreign to his artistic nature.



ALICE HUGHES.

"Making an ark," he replied, sourly, as he pointed out the window to where our seventh day of rain was falling. "Only 33 days to go," he said.

Whatever his failings, he knows the Book of Genesis, wherein "the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth." He was taking no chances, and decided to be a modern Noah perched on Murray Hill instead of Ararat. He thinks St. Swithin is mixed up in it, too. For we have been having floods. Our enormous dams at Kensico and Croton, in Westchester County, have been overflowing—pet motor roads have been covered and hundreds of cellars flooded—thousands of damp and homesick kids have come screaming home from their camps in the nearby country. For six days there were no ball games, and a green mold has grown on our bodies and spirits. Fancy new clothes have been no good—all we have needed are slickers and gumboots. Why, doggone it, we may even make the newsreel yet, while the merchants of Fifth avenue sulk and sob behind their desks.

Humidity of 99 has not been rare here, and anyone wishing a sample of New York's summer air has been able to scoop it up with a teaspoon and pour it in a bottle. Practical things, such as getting into damp rubber girdles have been impossible to our womenfolk. The boys' cigars go out between puffs in the awful mug. After thinking it over, I feel that civic pride brought it all on. Ever since Hollywood had its flood last spring, we've felt "What can Hollywood have that New York can't." So we've had our flood, too. And, gah, how we hate it!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—With several thousand others, I went down to wave goodbye to the royal Swedish delegation after its visit, which was an enormous success—the nicest, most dignified royal visit ever paid American shores. The Crown Prince and his wife charmed everyone with their unaffected democracy, and Prince Bertil's youthful good looks pleased the young ladies. And the Swedish flag looked mighty nice flying before the Ritz Carlton Hotel on Madison avenue, too.

Movie stars are again driving our reporters crazy, with their marriage riddles. When Sylvia Sidney sailed for London, and we asked her if she was going to marry Luther Adler, the actor, she remarked "I won't say so," and retired. When one of the boys quizzed Katie Hepburn on the Howard Hughes thing, all he got in answer was a wink. Kate has slowed up. Two years ago he would have gotten a kick in the pants.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Telling Papa.

"Bill, you've simply got to go over to the Ginks' and tell them they've got to keep that nasty little old Susie of theirs at home."

"What's she done now?"

"Done! Why she came over here this afternoon and jumped on Sonny Boy again! Right in his own yard!"

"What'd he done to her?"

"Why, nothing at all! She started it. She slapped him and scratched him and made him cry—it was the most pitiful sight you ever saw!"

"What's the matter with him? Can't he take care of himself?"

"How can he—and be a gentleman? Besides, if he was to fight back, Mrs. Gink'd be over here raising Cain. You know how silly they are about Susie."

"Well, why don't you keep Sonny Boy away from her?"

"Say, you know as well as I do, Sonny Boy can't stay in the house all the time. He needs sunshine. The doctor said he doesn't get near enough vitamin C as it is. Besides, it's his yard——"

"Say, I'd like to see anybody make her do anything. She doesn't know the first rule of obedience. She's simply spoilt rotten."

"Well, Sonny Boy's no angel."

"No, but he's been brought up properly. And what meanness he knows has been taught him by Susie—and that little old Buddie across the street."

"Well, I don't know what I can do about it."

"Do! You can go right over to them and tell 'em——"

"Why don't you tell 'em?"

"I did; I took Susie straight home and told Mrs. Gink plenty."

"What did she say?"

"Say? What does she always say? That Sonny Boy started it. She simply wouldn't listen to reason."

"Did you ask her to keep Susie at home?"

"Yes, and do you know what she had the nerve to say? That Sonny Boy came over in her yard and ruined all of her petunias?"

"Did he?"

"Of course he didn't! What's more she was absolutely insulting. Do you know what she said?"

"What?"

"That Sonny Boy was nothing but a common cur!"

"No!"

"Yes! And do you know what I said, 'Oh, is that so, is it? Well, I just want to tell you that Susie is nothing but a mean-looking, narrow-faced alley cat!'"

"You didn't say that!"

"I certainly did! She was simply furious. She slammed the door right in my face!"

"Well, then, I guess that settles it."

"It certainly doesn't! I want you to march right over there now and tell Mr. Gink——"

"Say, I can't do that!"

"You can't? Well, then, there's just one thing for us to do!"

"What?"

"Move! I've said all along this is no neighborhood to bring up a dog in."

WPA Study Shows Worries of Youth

The belief that children are free from the worries besetting their elders has been seriously challenged by the results of a psychological study made by WPA research workers under the direction of Dr. Rudolf Pintner, of Teachers College, Columbia University, New York. A series of mental and personality tests were administered to a representative sample of the school population, after which a number of pupils were interviewed.

Both boys and girls are clearly worried about the present and future. Economic worries in particular are bothering the young heads of the boys and girls. Fifty-two per cent of the girls tested were worried about not having enough money, and fully 71 per cent of the boys were anxious on this score.

Children feel their home responsibilities strongly and are especially anxious regarding the health and well-being of their parents.

Petunias Best Summer Flower To Use in Home Decoration

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

OF ALL the summer flowers that grow in our garden, we think we like the petunias the best. Oh sometimes we're partial to the roses and again we'll take a notion to the delphinium—but time and again we return to the profusion of our petunia beds with a feeling of thankfulness. For, say what you will, these flowers are just about the easiest to arrange and their uses are so varied that we are sure that, if we planted petunias and nothing else, we could have a never-ending supply of flower arrangements for summer days.

The secret is that petunias, whether of the perennial or annual type, have a practically foolproof way of "falling" gracefully. Just take a bunch of them, stick them without ceremony in a jug and invariably they will fall into tender lovely lines. They're a lazy gardener's flowers anyway. For they can be informal as a tea cozy or as formal as a silver urn.

You can put white ones in a can and set the can in a wicker basket and there you have a lovely porch arrangement. Or you can mix white and deep purple petunias and place them in an ornate pottery or china container and have a mass arrangement worthy of any drawing room. The annuals with the extremely curly edges and flamboyant colors mix well with almost all of the summer flowers and are usually just what you need for a low center of interest in a bouquet.

One dining table arrangement made by a friend took our eye. Someone gave her a group of white majolica, including a center bowl in white with dolphins and cherubs climbing about it and two small containers for end pieces. She arranges petunias in the center one and fills the two small containers with sweet allysum and one or three of the smaller petunia blooms. The effect is dainty and cool and sounds off just the right note for a summer luncheon for "the girls."

Roster of 'America's Young Men' Lists 282 'Eligibles' in the Capital

Social Secretaries Might Get Some Good Tips Out of Volume 3 of Book Naming Outstanding Bachelors; Thomas Corcoran Given Special Mention.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Ambitious mamas, debs, post-debs and social secretaries who, in making up invitation lists, eagerly and sometimes hopelessly scan the social register for flocks of eligible males, might do well to thumb through volume 3 of "America's Young Men," just off the press.

Edited by Durward Howes, this official who's who of outstanding men, forty or under, includes biographies of 282 District of Columbia residents whose achievements are worthy of note. On the list there are only 44 who are not married; but if all these could be drawn into the partying whirl, the social scene would take on considerable interest for society's feminine contingent, now accustomed to attending scores of dinners and dances at which there are barely enough men to go around.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Among the 44 are a dozen lawyers, four Representatives whose names also are listed under the States from which they have been elected, several Government officials, writers and research experts. A few are social registerites, but more are not. Most of the outstanding young men of America seem to have made their name and fame without benefit of the little "black book of the blue bloods."

The four members of Congress—either married or failing to mention their wives—who are listed in the District of Columbia group are Representative Warren G. Magnuson, 33, of North Dakota; Representative J. Joseph Smith, 34, of Connecticut; Representative Dewey Short, 40, of Missouri, and Representative Aaron Lane Ford, 34, of Mississippi.

Several others who rate this classification evidently have not designated the District as one of their homes. Senator Rush Dew Holt, 33, has included only his Weston, W. Va., address.

'Tommy the Cork' Has Impressive Biography

Impressive is the biography of Thomas Gardiner Corcoran, the 37-year-old Pawtucket, R. I., boy who is "Tommy the Cork" to the President and one of his chief advisers. It's a feather in the cap of almost any Washington hostess to have Mr. Corcoran accept her dinner invitations. He doesn't do it often, but when he does, he generally brings along his accordion and entertains the crowd hours on end. Counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Special Assistant to the Attorney General, Mr. Corcoran has come a long way since he finished Harvard and first hit Washington as secretary to Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. For the next year or two, chances are the press of other activity will keep him out of the social picture, but whether you like him or not, you can be sure of one thing—the parties he does manage to attend will be lively and interesting.

Law seems to have attracted the largest group of young Washingtonians included in the book. To mention but a few of the legal lights who are still single and those whose names are listed——there are Arthur Brann Caldwell, 31, Assistant United State District Attorney; Joseph Eugene Keller, 31, attorney and Administrative Assistant to the Federal Communications Commission; Brunson MacChesney, 29, lawyer and associate professor of law; Clinton De Witt Vernon, 31, attorney; Will Gordon Beardslee, 38, attorney in the Department of Justice; Brendan Francis Brown, 39, member of the law faculty, Catholic University; James Forrester Davison, 36, associate professor of law, George Washington University; Edward H. Foley, jr., 33, assistant general counsel, Treasury Department.

Also in this group are several listed as special assistants to the Attorney General. I had no idea the affable and able "A. G." had so many helpers. Every other young lawyer down the list seems to be either a special assistant or an attorney in the Department of Justice. Among those in the unmarried classification, in addition to Thomas Corcoran, are Paul Freund, 30, and Brien McMahon, 34.

William O. Douglas Makes Leading List

William O. Douglas, 40-year-old chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, is included on the list of the year's outstanding younger men selected each year by the editor of America's Young Men. Not in the unmarried group—for he has an attractive wife, a son and a daughter—Mr. Douglas has one of the longest biographies in the book.

Others named as "America's Younger Leaders" are Edgar Bergen creator of Charlie McCarthy; Donald Budge, tennis champion; Thomas Dewey, New York District Attorney, and racket-smasher; Howard Hughes, aviator; Robert Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; Franklin M. Kremel, contributor to traffic safety; Rosewell P. Rosengren, president, U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce; John Steinback, author of "Of Mice and Men," and Ernest O. Lawrence, scientist.

Not as "leaders" but among those present in America's Young Men, are two of the President's sons—James Roosevelt, 31-year-old presidential secretary, and Elliott Roosevelt, listed as "radio executive and rancher." The book as a whole includes 6,532 biographies of contemporary men, 40 years of age or younger. In compiling his material Mr. Howes, who has been editing volumes of this type since 1934, selected his list from 29,000 names submitted.

Heffners to Make Home in Roanoke

Marriage Took Place Here on July 27.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Bryson Heffner, whose marriage took place here last Wednesday, will make their home in Roanoke, Va.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Wallace Riley and the late Mr. Riley. With the Rev. Karl Newell officiating, the ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's mother in the presence of relatives and a few friends.

The former Miss Riley wore a tailored white frock and a small blue hat. Miss Elizabeth Barden, of New York, was the bride's only attendant. P. D. Heffner, jr., brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Mrs. Heffner, a member of an old Washington family, is a graduate of Goucher College and the social science school of Catholic University. She has been director of the Cornell Medical Center in New York and she organized and was director of the social science school of the Medical College of Virginia, at Richmond. Her husband, who is the son of Mrs. P. D. Heffner and the late Mr. Heffner, of Spartanburg, S. C., is a graduate of Clemson College.

Miss Wilkinson Gives Cocktail Fete for Guest

Party Is in Compliment to Miss Alison Thomson, a Paris Classmate.

In compliment to Miss Alison Thomson, her house guest, Miss Lucile Wilkinson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Oscar Wilkinson, entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon.

Miss Thomson, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomson, of San Francisco, became close friends with Miss Wilkinson last winter in Paris, where they both were studying art. Not only new acquaintances came to meet Miss Thomson yesterday afternoon, but many old friends who knew her when she attended school at Gunston Hall here some years ago.

Hostess Receives In Sun Parlor.

The sun parlor of the Wilkinson home on Sixteenth street was banked with a mass of summer flowers. There the hostess and Miss Thomson received their guests from 5 to 7 yesterday. The guests, after greeting their young hostesses, wandered on through the dining room where the table, gleaming through a delicate lace table cloth, offered them dainty sandwiches, all manner of hors d'ouvres and frosty cocktails, and out into the garden with its lush, grass-carpeted lawn.

Fashion-minded guests received a preview of what the well-dressed women of Washington will be wearing this autumn, for having just returned from abroad, both the hostess and her guests of honor wore the very latest in Paris gowns. Miss Wilkinson was gowned in a Lanvin model, one of the new street length afternoon formals. It was fashioned of a gray print silk trimmed in white, made with a square neckline (which is very new), short puffed sleeves and with a very full pleated skirt. With this she wore a corsage of gardenias.

Guests of Honor Also Wears Paris Frock.

Miss Thomson chose for afternoon a Molyneux model (Molyneux, it will be remembered, makes most of the Duchess of Windsor's gowns). It is of Molyneux's newest material, dark red and blue print on white, very gay in effect. It is fashioned with a high neck, short sleeves that flare and are padded at the shoulder, and is shirred to a great fullness in the front. With this Miss Thomson wore earring clips and a neck clip of Jensen silver (hand wrought by that famous Dane), which she brought with her from Denmark. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of Rubrum lillies.

Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Geoffry Will, Mrs. Richard Wilkinson, and Mrs. Milton Price. Guests included Miss Aldah Whitelaw, Miss Ruth Marlow, William Thomson, Miss Virginia Ford, Lieut. and Mrs. Arthur Quinn, Miss Emily Mitchell, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. W. F. Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mellefont, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Nicklas, Miss Caroline Stanley, Miss Katherine Boykin, Francis Stephens, Dallas Pickens, Charles Tuttle, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Lee, Miss MacClaire Mooklar, Miss Audrey Rout, Jasse Nicholson, John Shew, Miss Elizabeth Buell, William Hoge, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Ober and Oscar Wilkinson, jr.

Cantwells Honor Couple From Brazil With Dinner Here

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Cantwell entertained at dinner at the Shoreham Terrace last evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Varty, of Sao Paulo, Brazil, who are visiting Col. and Mrs. Bruce Bently at Laurel, Md. Mr. and Mrs. Varty are leaving Laurel shortly for a month's fishing in Maine, but will return to the Bently's before going back to South America. Mr. Varty is the American representative for the National City Bank of New York in Rio de Janeiro.

Other guests were Dr. and Mrs. Bryan Orr, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Hausler, Mrs. William Bentley and Frank B. Helan.

Mrs. Ellis is the former Miss Bernice Elizabeth Putnam, daughter of J. Turner Putnam, of Front Royal, Va. Mr. Ellis, the son of Mrs. Carrie P. Ellis, is associated with The Post.

French Envoy Sails Aboard The Normandie

Jesse Joneses Also Leave for a Leisurely Tour of England, France.

Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, the French Ambassador, topped the distinguished passenger list of the Normandie yesterday as the big boat nosed out of New York for Southampton and Havre.

Others on board included the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Jesse Jones, and Mrs. Jones. They have no definite day-by-day itinerary planned for their European jaunt, but will travel leisurely through England and France and perhaps will stay briefly in Switzerland. One thing is certain—France will be their first port of call. They will then go to England, and after that, back to France again. They will be gone for about five weeks. More than likely Mr. and Mrs. Jones will commandeer a car and chauffeur when they reach the other side and do their gypsying by motor car.

McDonald to Observe Housing in Europe.

Also on the Normandie is Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Commissioner, who is making a speedy four-week tour of housing projects in England, France, Denmark and Sweden. His mission is all business, as he has been sent over on this special trip by the Secretary of State.

Others aboard the Normandie include Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, who are bound for Hungary and the shooting season there. They will be joined later by Mr. and Mrs. Lee P. Warren, of this city. Another on the passenger list was Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, former Representative from New York.

Goes to Scotland For Shooting Season.

The former United States Ambassador to France, Walter E. Edge, who sailed for Europe yesterday, likewise will get in a little "shooting," but in Scotland instead of Hungary. Mrs. Edge will stay a while longer at their home in Small Point, Me., with their son and daughter, Walter, jr., and Camilla. A little later she will join Mr. Edge in Europe. The children will remain in Maine.

Senora Alfaro's Sister Expires in California Home

From Alameda, Calif., has come a report of the death there on Tuesday evening of Miss Victoria Lyons, sister of Senora Ricardo J. Alfaro of Washington. Having gone to California some time ago to be with Miss Lyons, Senora Alfaro was at her bedside when she died.

Dr. Alfaro, former Minister of Panama, and his son, Rogelio, will leave Saturday for the West and will meet Senora Alfaro in Nogales, Ariz., returning later from there to Washington.

Nancy Leiter Is Hostess To Two House Guests

Miss Nancy Leiter, who has been vacationing in New England is back in town, and has as her house guests Miss Frieda Anderson and Miss Virginia Anderson of Marblehead, Mass.

Much of Miss Leiter's time this summer has been spent in the quaint seacoast town, home of her visitors.

Mrs. Haupt Is an Expert In a Unique Science Here

Surrounded by Hundreds of Pieces of Colored Glass, Charts and Big Cameras, She Keeps Cottonseed Oil and Traffic Lights Standard.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Hundreds of little rectangular pieces of glass, carefully labeled and placed in velvet-lined cases, give testimony to the painstaking work of Mrs. Geraldine Walker Haupt, who is engaged in colorimetric and spectrophotometric work in the optical division at the National Bureau of Standards. The results of her research effect such widely different fields as the vegetable and cottonseed oil industry and the railroads.

Mrs. Haupt presides over laboratories equipped with intricate machines for calibrating red Lovibond glass and 35 yellow, which are combined to attain a color by which cottonseed oil is graded. Before the color was standardized through a series of tests over a long period of years at the bureau, there were constant disputes between buyers and sellers of huge quantities of oil as to its quality. It was graded by color, and the glass by which it was gauged differed in different laboratories. Now all such glass used must meet the scale set at the Bureau of Standards.

The Martens photometer, by which the test is made, shows the most minute variations in color tones and records them so readings may be taken and comparisons made. This test is made visually and tires the eyes so it is impossible to continue for long a time. There are other projects, however, at which Mrs. Haupt works while she is "resting" from this.

Test Glass for Railroad Signals.

Across the hall is a small room, equipped with a chart indicating the six different hues used in railroad signals and the color tolerance permitted in them. There are the red, green and yellow commonly used in traffic signals also; blue for cars under which men are working, and purple and lunar white, on switch tracks. The glasses are measured on the spectrophotometer to analyze their spectral distribution. This work is done in co-operation with the signal engineers of the Association of American Railroads and the Corning Glass Works, which provides the glass used in the duplicates tested and certified by the bureau.

In order to use a visual spectrophotometer the eyes must have a particular sensitivity, Mrs. Haupt explained.

Mrs. Haupt would not say she was the only woman doing such work but admitted she knew of no other engaged in that particular field.

Basement Laboratory Has Intricate Apparatus.

Not all spectral energy can be detected with the eye, and that which goes down the scale into the ultra violet can be tested only by means of photographic instrument. This is located in a laboratory in the basement of the building, in a large room entered through two doors. There is an air of mystery about the place partly because it is underground, and partly because of the complicated apparatus with which it is equipped.

"Danger, High Voltage," reads a large sign which greets one as the door is opened. This warns of a part of the apparatus which generates electricity up to several hundred thousand volts in order to create a spark under water. At the opposite side of the room are large bottles of distilled water on a high platform, from which tubes carry it down into the instrument in which the spark is generated. Below the water platform, is a camera with a long neck covered with a black cloth, and on the table are the little switches which turn on the current. The dark and light lines on the plate record the wave lengths. The instrument photographs from 200 to 500 millimicron units.

Mrs. Haupt develops her own plates also and then takes readings and makes comparisons for her results.

Mrs. Haupt, following her graduation from Goucher College, took her master's degree at Johns Hopkins University and came here, in 1927, as research associate for the American Oil Chemists Society. The following year, she became a member of the staff of the National Bureau of Standards. She is an active member of Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority and alumnae editor of its national "Quarterly." Her husband, Ralph Freeman Haupt, to whom she was married in 1934, is also engaged in scientific work, at the Naval Observatory.

Miss Murray to Play.

Miss Catherine Murray, who was to have presented the program this week at the Monday tea of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women, will be heard next Monday instead. Miss Loretta Cunningham has been announced as hostess for the meeting.

"MADAME CHAIRMAN"

By Suzanne.

SUMMER is not a vacation time so far as publicity for the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women is concerned, at the hands of its newly-appointed chairman, Myrl O. Rhine. The Monday teas, redecoration of the clubhouse and any interesting visitors who are members of the A. A. U. W. all are grist for her mill.

Writing is nothing new to her. She holds a B. S. in Industrial Journalism from Kansas State College at Manhattan, which has the oldest schools of printing in the United States. While a student there, she received honorary membership in the National Quill Club for short story writing and her first feature stories were published in the Kansas City Star. She still writes more than A. A. U. W. publicity, doing occasional features for the Transmitter, Telephone company magazine for employes, and writes poetry which appears in various poetry publications.

She is interested in dramatics, too, especially Shakespearean plays, and last year had a role in Maurice Greet's production of "Love's Labour Lost."

In addition to all this, Miss Rhine is active in several organizations which are particularly concerned with women's problems and has worked on legislative matters relating to the economic status of women, in which she is much interested.

She holds a position as production clerk of the Advertising Department of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.

MRS. ALEXANDER W. WEDDELL, wife of the American Ambassador to Argentine, writes in a letter to Mabel Vernon, director of the people's mandate committee:

"We are wildly celebrating peace here—Te Deums at the Cathedral, special sessions of Congress, dinners and balls with Paraguay and Bolivia happily celebrating the coming of peace. So that shows what can be done by arbitration, and the members of the peace commissions are rewarded for three or more years' hard and often discouraging work.

"I am very proud of the work of the People's Mandate and congratulate you on the achievements of its members."

If members of Beta Sigma Phi international educational sorority, need ideas for places to spend their "two weeks with pay" their own organization is ready to step right up with suggestions. The sorority not only maintains summer camps of its own, the best known, Frontenac, on Huckleberry Island, in Ontario, and Su-Ro-Jac, at Three Lakes, Wis., but also organizes tours for its members.

The sorority, which is comprised of young business and professional women, was organized in April, 1931 and since then, chapters have been formed in all States but Vermont. It also has among its 700 chapters, some in Honolulu, Canada and British Columbia. Gamma Chapter of Washington, of which Irene Stevenson is president, is part of the middle eastern area.

Mrs. Ellis Logan sponsored the chapter when it was founded in March, 1932. During the past year it has welcomed many members coming to Washington from other places.

BEDTIME STORIES

By Theodore W. Burgess.

When plans succeed, you're sure to find
A very pleasant state of mind.
—Old Mother Nature.

It was so with Striped Chipmunk. He had moved, and not one of his friends in fur and feathers knew where he had moved to. Neither did any of his enemies. Many of them didn't even know that he was no longer living under the Old Stone Wall where he had lived so long. If they missed him at all they merely thought that he was down in his home when they happened to be about. Could they have seen the location of his new home some of them certainly would have thought him crazy. Yes sir, could they have seen the doorway to that new home right out in the open in Farmer Brown's lawn they surely would have thought that Striped Chipmunk had lost his senses.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy knew where it was, for quite by accident Sue had discovered it and shown it to the others, but they were friends and the secret was quite safe with them. Black Pussy, prowling in the shrubbery around the front of Farmer Brown's house as Cats love to do, had found where Striped Chipmunk had started digging and had thrown out the sand. She had spent a great deal of time watching there. For a while the hole had been open, but later she found it closed. Still she visited it every day, hoping to find it open again and to surprise Striped Chipmunk there.

Striped Chipmunk knew this. Black Pussy would have been a surprised Cat could she have known how often Striped Chipmunk had watched her as she watched his former back door and had chuckled as he watched. It was a silent chuckle, an inside chuckle that made no sound. Not once did Black Pussy think of looking out in the grass of the lawn for the doorway to Striped Chipmunk's home, and this is just what he had felt sure would be the case when he made it there. When entering or leaving it he was very careful to make sure that no one was near, no one watching. And the doorway was so small and the grass, even though short, so hid it, that unless one happened to be standing right over it and looking down it wasn't likely to be seen.

That hole was just a few feet out from the edge of the shrubbery, just far enough to be beyond jumping distance of any one hiding under the shrubbery. When Striped Chipmunk left home it required only a second to dart across to the shrubbery and out of sight.

Once very early in the morning before folks were astir in Farmer Brown's house, Striped Chipmunk prepared to go out. As usual, he very cautiously poked little more than his nose and eyes out and carefully looked around in all directions. Peter Rabbit was on the lawn headed in his direction. Striped Chipmunk quietly withdrew just enough to be out of sight. Along came Peter Iipperty-lipperty-lip, and sat down so close to that hole that his funny little white tail actually covered it and Peter didn't know it. Again Striped Chipmunk chuckled inside. It was a great temptation to reach up and give that tail a twitch, but of course he didn't.

There were ferns growing in the shrubbery, and under these Striped Chipmunk was so well hidden that if he sat still even the sharpest eyes in the bushes above him would not see him. He was sitting there under the ferns when Sammy Jay stopped in a shrub just above him. Mrs. Sammy alighted there a moment later. It was evident that they had just come from that part of the Old Orchard over the Old Stone Wall.

"Did you see anything of Striped Chipmunk over there?" Sammy asked.

Mrs. Sammy shook her head. "Neither did I," said Sammy. "Now I think of it, I haven't seen the rascal for quite a while. I hope nothing has happened to him."

"I saw Shadow the Weasel over at one end of the Old Stone Wall a few days ago," said Mrs. Sammy.

"I hope he didn't catch Striped Chipmunk," said Sammy Jay. "He's a saucy little rascal, but I like him. Everybody does. I hope Shadow didn't get him."

"So do I," replied Mrs. Sammy.

Again Striped Chipmuk chuckled, but as before it was a silent chuckle.

Zontians Hear Miss Courtney Tell of Dancing

Describes How She Taught Her First Class While in the Eighth Grade.

Miss Adelaide Courtney, one of the active members of the Zonta Club of Washington, yesterday was presented as speaker at its weekly luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. and told of her work in dancing. The program was one of a series the club has held during the season, in which members have described their professions.

Miss Courtney, a teacher of dancing, told an entertaining story of how her parents had endeavored, without success to start her in music. Then an aunt in New York made the discovery that her music was "not in her fingers but in her toes" and urged that she be taught dancing. With the confidence of a child, she said, she thought that in the first three lessons she would be a dancer. Her hopes were dampened when the first two lessons were devoted entirely to learning what to do with her hands and feet, without any instruction in dancing.

When she was in the eighth grade she took her first pupil, a playmate whose mother asked if she wouldn't give her dancing lessons. The child came with four other little girls. In a short time there were eight, and from then on her teaching continued. Her mother, she said, is her business manager and has a more difficult job than her own. Teaching children is easy and enjoyable, Miss Courtney told her sister Zontians.

She presented a group of her pupils as Zonta's part of the program at the intracity dinner given by the women's service clubs at the Washington Country Club last May.

Miss Courtney is spending the summer in New York, studying, and returned to Washington, for only a brief stay.

She was introduced by Miss Emma T. Hahn, president of the club, who presided at the luncheon meeting.

Among those who attended were Caroline Longfellow, who has just returned from a vacation trip to Banff and Yosemite National Park; Mrs. Emily Dickinson, who was accompanied by her granddaughters; Nan Street, Marguerite Morris, Alice Fay, Harriett Howe, who has just come back from a vacation; Dr. Mildred Dickerson, Frances Gutelius Smith, Nannie Meem, Josephine Prescott, Louise Stambaugh, Florence Sindell, Helen Steinbarger, Ruth Shelton, Marion Hines Taylor, Anna Muddiman, Edith Salisbury, Sarah Wetherall and Frances Powell Hill.

D. of A. Sponsors Annual Field Day

Associate State Councilor Edna H. Gaither was chairman of the committee on general arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Maybelle Bernard, coresponding secretary. Members of all the local councils and their families joined in the affair, going to the park aboard the City of Washington. Some left as early as 10 in the morning and others took the 2 o'clock boat or the sunset cruise at 5:30. Those who went during the day participated in the program of athletics. There was also a group which took the moonlight cruise at 8:30.

Mrs. Newman to Give Party in Fall For Soroptimist Club's Members

The informal meetings of the Soroptimist Club, held at the Willard Coffee Shop on Wednesdays during the summer months, are popular with the membership.

Those present at yesterday's luncheon were Mrs. Agnes Newman, president of the club; Miss Augusta Uhl, Miss Ella Werner, Mrs. Lorraine Good, Miss Rose Cohen, Mrs. Emily Shaw, Miss Emma A. Buechele, who has just returned from a two weeks' vacation on Cape Cod, Mrs. Betty Jones and her guest, Mrs. Helen Brown.

Club news was exchanged during the luncheon. Mrs. Newman reported that she and Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch attended an al fresco party given by the members of the Soroptimist Club of Arlington, Va. Mrs. Newman announced she would give a garden party for the club in September at her country home near Alexandria.

Party Is Planned For Spain's Relief

A garden party and musicale under the auspices of the American Relief Ship for Spain Committee will be held tomorrow at 3337 Tennyson street northwest. This is one in a series of affairs which is being held to supply clothing and food to war sufferers in Spain. The Nation-wide campaign has as a quota 5,000 tons of food, clothing and medical supplies.

The feature of the evening will be music by a quartet from the National Symphony Orchestra which will play Spanish music and other classical numbers.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

In the summer, the test of the well-dressed official is, can he keep his white suit presentable until lunch time? Those who work in air-cooled offices do better than their subordinates . . . Some of the young New Dealers I see at lunch must stand at attention all morning to remain so immaculate. Or maybe they take their pants off and work, like H. L. Mencken, in shorts.

Sumner Welles. . . . best dressed

• • • •

There's a cathedral calm about the clothes of Sumner Welles, the Undersecretary of State. His black satin neckties are as ecclesiastic as a necktie can be. Welles is always mentioned as one of the best dressed; he can stand up to any Briton without sartorial, if not diplomatic, eclipse.

• • • •

Like Jimmy Roosevelt, he has the figure for it, which is half the battle, and more important than an income that tolerates $175 suits . . . Jimmy, who confesses to only four business suits despite his ample bank account, is as well-dressed as many a Washingtonian with 20 or 30 suits in his closet.

"—some stalk their clothes"

No new glory has appeared to replace Rex Tugwell's purple linen suit, which once almost won him the snake-skin belt as the Capital's best dressed man . . . His successor as the No. 1 bugaboo, Tommy Corcoran, is an indifferent dresser. There are nights when he hasn't time or energy even to empty his pockets . . . Tommy would look well in a Napoleonic shad-belly coat.

• • • •

Were it not for a treacherous shirt which has a tendency to creep above his belt, Bill Douglas, the Securities Exchange genius, might be a dresser of great distinction, in a quiet way . . . Some people suspect Jimmy Dunn, the State Department adviser, of wearing underdrawers that are part of his shirt tail, in a sort of unilateral pact.

• • • •

For some of Washington's officials, the important matter of clothes is part of the daily agenda. Their fittings at the tailor's are fairly regular, and when they show up there's a bedlam of excitement, with cutters and fitters and contact men rushing in every direction with tape measures, scissors, bolts of cloth and style books.

• • • •

Others, however, like Corcoran, Henry Wallace and Lowell Mellett (the Emergency man) are a trifle disdainful about clothes. They would probably like to pull up at the curb on the way to the office, point to a suit in the window, and say "Send me two of those." Though Jerome Frank, the New Dealer who was purged and bounced back as tough as ever, is inclined to be lukewarm about most things British, he is a trifle casual and tweedily English in his vestments.

"—some dress on the fly"

The work of government is not hard on the clothes, and a Government official who buys a couple of suits a year is likely to build up quite a wardrobe through the years, provided he protects the seat of his pants with a felt or rubber chair pad . . . By 1940 many a New Dealer who stuck clear through with Roosevelt will have 16 suits in his closet.

• • • •

In the rank and file of officialdom there is a breezier tendency to experiment with odd coats and pants. This inclination, it seems to me, is the real hope of masculine costuming; as more and more men come to the Government pay rolls at moderate but permanent salaries, there will be less and less of this slavish adherence to one color and one fabric from neck to ankles, and more adventurous blending of flannels, gabardines, tweeds and worsteds.

• • • •

With a sort of warm, patriotic devotion, Washingtonians keep saying that General Pershing is the best-dressed man in town. His erect figure would probably enhance any size 42 off the rack . . . Most well-dressed men are, after all, a mere coincidence between chest and hip measurements and the size the clothiers have hit on so arbitrarily, two inches apart.

But I think a word should be said for Charley Michelson, the propaganda mastermind of the Democrats, and Frank Waltman, his rival poison-peddler for the Republicans. They are each, in their own ways, the finest flower of two different sartorial schools. Charley wears his clothes loose and baggy, while Frank's are tighter, with a loyal adherence to curves. Charley is twice as old as Frank, but Frank is twice as heavy. There must be some deep inner significance in this. I must consult an astrologer.

The Public Utilities Commission delayed until next Tuesday decisions on Washington gas rates, following a brief hearing yesterday at which William McK. Clayton, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, moved that the primary rate of return of the Washington Gas Light Co. be reduced from 6½ to 6 per cent.

The gas company next week will bring in a proposal for between rate reduction of $35,000 and $50,000, but no indication was given yesterday as to what schedules may be lowered.

The amount involved, unless the basic return is cut to 6 per cent, is so small that any change in rate will be scarcely noticeable by the average consumer, members of the commission said. Should the commission adopt Clayton's proposal, another $60,000 would be available for rate reduction.

One of the plans for absorbing the excess profit under consideration is a lowering of the minimum 75-cent monthly bill as applied to apartments.

Several accounting items are in dispute between the commission's chief accountant, B. M. Bachman, and representatives of the gas company, and this accounts for the uncertainty as to whether the excess profit is to be $37,860 or $53,117.

Bachman testified the gas company earned $1,580,859 on its $23,155,955 valuation last year. The rate of return was 6.827 per cent.

Under the sliding scale arrangement in effect half of the excess profit above 6.5 per cent is made available for rate reduction.

Oldest Inhabitants Meet in Refinished 'Old Engine House'

The meeting room of the Old Engine House glowed with bright new colors last night as the Association of Oldest Inhabitants gathered there for the first time since the redecoration was completed.

It was the first time the interior of the historic room has been refinished in more than 20 years. The walls now are chipper yellow and gold, and there is the smell of newness inside.

Movers' Conclave Names Brooklyn Man as President

Robert W. Wilson, Brooklyn household transfer executive, was named last night the first president of the newly formed Independent Movers and Warehousemen's Association, concluding a two-day convention at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Named to the board of directors were Edward De Smet, of Detroit; William H. Engel, of Elizabeth, N. J.; Louis H. Kleinberg, of New York City, and A. C. Weathers, of Atlanta, Ga.

Nathan E. Zelby, of New York City, and Leo P. Kitchen, of Jacksonville, Fla., were named counsels of the association. Maurice Kressin, of the National Delivery Association here, was named local chairman.

About 15 representatives of trucking companies attended the meetings. Yesterday morning Kitchen gave an analysis of the truck-weight bases.

Average Jobless Applicant in Va. Receives $30.56

Richmond, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Virginia Unemployment Compensation Commission, between January 1 and August 1, paid an average of $30.56 to each applicant for unemployment relief, it was shown in figures released today.

During that time, $3,497,527.40 was paid out in 481,646 checks, making the average weekly check amount to $7.26. There were 114,440 persons who filed claims for compensation while they were unemployed.

The State has collected $12,997,760.62 in taxes on pay rolls since 1936 for application to unemployment compensation.

11 Kids to Go! Need $151 for Post Vacations

Eleven kids to go!

The camp fund yesterday climbed up to $1,248.07, which is so close to the goal of $1,400 that The Post feels sure the 11 additional children will be provided for. It will take only $151.93 to send them to camp along with the 89 who already have been taken care of.

If the 11 are left out, on the other hand, loud will be the weeping and wailing. Still more tragic than the disappointment will be the loss in weight and vitality caused by another long summer in Washington's heat.

Each contribution of $14 guarantees a vacation for one child. Eleven gifts of that amount will take care of all the children who are left.

Yesterday's contributions included:

Anonymous	$5.00
Messrs. Gibson and Scott	5.00
Charles Bliss	2.00
Kirke	2.00
W. B. Daniels	10.00
Mrs. George H. Markley	5.00

Police Free 4 Numbers Chiefs, Claim 'War' Here Forestalled

Four of 8 First Seized Still Questioned on Friction Between 'Big Shots' Muscling in and Independent Lottery Operators.

A war between organized and independent factions for supremacy in the District's rich numbers racket was believed forestalled last night as police released four of eight "big shots" seized for investigation Tuesday.

One of the men released, according to Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon, whose squad arrested the men, was the instigator of the trouble.

"He knows who is the boss now," Shimon declared, ordering the man's release after a writ of habeas corpus had been served. "We won't have any more trouble out of him," the lieutenant stated.

Shimon arrested the suspects in various sections of the city on orders of Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives. Thompson said he had underworld information that a man known as "Kingy," who has taken over the numbers racket left leaderless by the absence of Sam Beard, had armed henchmen forcing small numbers men to turn their receipts in to him.

"The little men were becoming worked up and I understood some of them armed to fight these strong-arm methods," Thompson declared. "We stopped the war before it started.

Shimon said the four men still in custody, after they are questioned, probably will be forced to leave the city.

Store Proprietor On Wisconsin Ave. Foils Holdup Try

As he turned the corner in his automobile at Forty-fifth and Fessenden streets a young bandit pressed a gun against the window of the car and commanded Williams to hand over his money. Instead, Williams pressed the horn on his car and as the would-be bandit fled, a police car drew up. Officers later arrested a young man answering the description.

"I never was afraid of guns," commented Williams.

Two thugs attacked Miss Eileen Whitzel, 17, of 1601 Evarts street, not far from her home last night. One of them struck her, knocking her down, and the other took her purse, containing $7 or $8. They fled before police could arrive.

Hamden, Conn., Pastor Is Promoted to Bishop

The Rev. Matthew Brady, pastor of St. Rita's Church at Hamden, Conn., has been named Catholic Bishop of Burlington, Vt., it was announced yesterday at the Apostolic Delegation. He succeeds Bishop Joseph J. Rice, who died April 1. Ordained in 1916, Bishop-Elect Brady was an army chaplain during the war and saw active service in France.

Maj. Gen. W.E.Cole Will Be Retired at Fort Meade in Fall

Maj. Gen. William E. Cole, commander of the Fifth Corps Area, will retire September 30 after reaching the statutory retirement age of 64 years, the War Department announced yesterday.

MAJ. GEN. COLE.

A graduate of the Coast Artillery School, Fort Monroe, Va., Gen. Cole during the World War organized and commanded the 351st Field Artillery at Fort George G. Meade, Md. After taking his regiment to France in 1918 he was appointed a temporary brigadier general. During the St. Mihiel offensive he was temporarily attached to the 153d Field Artillery Brigade as an observer. Upon his return to the United States he commanded the Eleventh Field Artillery at Fort Meade.

Since the Armistice Gen. Cole has commanded coast artillery troops at Fort Eustis, Va., and served as chief of the training section in the Office of the Chief of Coast Artillery. He also has been president of the Coast Artillery Board at Fort Monroe, Va., and has served two tours of duty in the Hawaiian Islands. He assumed command of the Fifth Corps Area in 1936.

Engineer Corps Detrains at Camp Ritchie

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Camp Ritchie, Md., August 3.—With shirts open at the neck and perspiring from a hot train, 500 officers and men of the 121st Engineers, District National Guard, detrained here this afternoon and marched to the encamment area.

Music from the crack regimental band failed to instill much pep in the men as they neared their final summer camp site. Col. John W. Oehman, commander of the organization, and his staff were at the head of the long column.

The regiment was disbanded into its separate companies and assigned tent areas inside of 20 minutes. Troops stacked arms, lined up their packs and were immediately served noon mess by company cooks who arrived in camp early this morning.

The amount of equipment used by the engineer organization was so great that a detail of 104th Qaurtermaster men was assigned to convoy six tons of it to camp by motor truck. The truck detail, a detachment from Company B, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, has been on duty with the engineers during their test mobilization encampment at Camp Simms. High praise was showered upon the men by Col. Oehman and engineer officers for their efficient work at Camp Simms.

The quartermaster company so far has completed a total of over 4,000 miles without accident in the transfer and conveying of 24 trucks and 15 reconnaissance cars between Washington, Baltimore, Pikesville, Md., and Camp Ritchie, according to Sergt. Charles W. Simms, truckmaster.

Corporal Donald Madden, of Company B, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, has recently been promoted to sergeant. Privts. George E. Miley, jr., and Warren C. Snyder, of the same organization, were promoted to corporal.

The 372d Infantry has been continuing its combat problems, with special emphasis on scouting the location of the enemy and fire control. Lectures in chemical warfare have been conducted by Sergt. Leslie Coates.

Little Doggies Heading for Last Roundup

10,000 Tagless Pups Face Pound; 59 Unwanted Pets Executed.

With an estimated 10,000 unlicensed dogs in Washington, the District poundmaster is carrying on a relentless roundup, which for many of the dogs is the "last roundup," the Commissioners were informed yesterday.

Frank Marks, poundmaster, said that dogs without tags are being picked up at the rate of 23 a day since the deadline last Saturday for old tags.

Fifty-nine have been executed so far this week in the pound's lethal chamber, he said, because their owners have cast them adrift. Some of these were turned into the pound by their masters. A few were diseased.

Tax Collector Chatham Towers meanwhile reported only 15,000 dog licenses had been sold this year, whereas 25,000 were licensed last year. He estimated that several thousand dogs without new tags are at large and may be picked up by the poundmaster.

Marks explained dogs taken to the pound are kept for a reasonable time. Owners may reclaim them by paying a $2 fee in addition to buying a new tag.

92 Girl Scouts Return From Camp in Virginia

Tanned and refreshed by two weeks out doors, 92 Washington Girl Scouts returned last night from Camp May Flather, Mount Solon, Va.

Their places will be taken by 97 other girls, who will leave today. Twenty-four other campers remained over for an extra session. The final contingent will depart for camp on August 19. The camp will close September 2.

Ohioan Starts Child Welfare Study Today

Miss Henry to Survey Industrial Home School Here.

Children's Home and Girl's Training Unit Other Problems.

An intensive study of child welfare in Washington will be started this morning under the direction of Miss Dorothy D. Henry, Cleveland social worker, who was given a temporary appointment yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Among the problems to be solved are whether or not the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin avenue is to be closed and the inmates moved to Muirkirk, Md., and disposition of the Children's Receiving Home and the National Training School for Girls.

Miss Henry, whose salary of $5,600 a year is being paid by a social security grant, will co-ordinate the work done by the Child Welfare League of America and the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department.

Preliminary recommendations will be made by Miss Henry and her advisory committee to the Commissioners by September 15 so provision may be made in the 1940 District estimates for any changes.

Appointment of Miss Henry was recommended by Miss Katharine Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau, and Elwood Street, public welfare director. She has been in social welfare work since 1918 and is now superintendent of the Juvenile Detention Home of Cuyahoga County, Ohio.

'Miss Washington' Enjoys Laurels; to Visit White House

Miss Dorothy Parker, 18-year-old beauty who was chosen as the 1938 "Miss Washington" on a cruise of the steamer City of Washington Tuesday night, yesterday enjoyed the laurels that go to a conqueror.

Miss Parker was dined and taken around the city to meet celebrities. Today at 11 a. m. she will visit the White House, the first Miss Washington to be so honored.

Chosen "Miss Columbia Heights" last spring, she won her title from a field of 15 contestants. Two of the original 17 entries were unable to be present at the final judging on the moonlight cruise. They were Miss Betty Crown and Miss Betty Jean Smalley. Miss Crown was not in the city Tuesday and Miss Smalley, taking a night off from her job as a waitress, missed the boat as it swung away from the Wilson Line dock.

Runners-up in the contest were Miss Nadine Petrey, who placed second, and Miss Toni Mann, third. The new Miss Washington, who lives at 1228 Shepherd street northwest and is a senior at Roosevelt High School, will represent the Capital at the national contest to be held in Atlantic City during the first week in September.

Recovery Signs.

St. Louis, Aug. 3.—"I would say," said Mr. Charles Burke, "that there are signs to warrant the belief that a definite upswing in the Nation's business is already taking place. I note distinct increase in activity in many lines and am confident that the pendulum is swinging back to better times."

POVICH.

And Mr. Burke's business?

Taking bets. Mr. Burke, a bespectacled, white-haired, gentleman who operated the Midwest's largest bookmaking business from his establishment at Twelfth and Locust streets, has never been wrong in his forecasts of future business conditions, he will have you know.

"I called the depression that started in 1929, and I gambled heavily on a recovery under Roosevelt in 1932," said Mr. Burke. "Two years ago I predicted the Roosevelt recession, and two months ago I foresaw this gradual recovery. In my business, I have my finger on the pulse of times."

The bookmaking business, Mr. Burke would have you know, is peculiarly identified with the economic trends of the Nation.

Business Is Up.

"We bookmakers are the last to be hit by the depression but the first to realize that one is sweeping the country," amplified Mr. Burke. "Similarly, we know when the Nation is beginning to find its way out of the economic fog. In the bookmaking business we have definite ways of telling that."

How, Mr. Burke?

"Well, take these times, for example. The people who have been making $5 and $10 bets with me on the horses, or the ball games or the fights, are now betting in their former style—$50 and $100 bets. They have made a partial recovery in their own business and are trying to recoup completely by gambling more heavily.

"When the Nation's recovery is complete, those same men will up their bets to $100 and $200 at a crack. It was much the same when the recession set in. The businessmen who were being hard hit attempted to recoup by upping their bets with me. The depression was on, but the bookmaking business wasn't feeling it. We were actually profiting from it. When the recession endured, the betters couldn't continue those big wagers. They settled down to moderate, even stingy bets."

Remember Mr. Kearney?

"But now there are definite signs that better times are with us. The recovery hasn't been as fast as the folks would have liked it, so they are trying to get all their losses back by gambling. The beginning and the gradual end of each depression is good for our business."

Mr. Burke's clients are not only St. Louisians, but people in virtually all the States and many of the Territories. Mr. Burke has succeeded to the business conducted at the same stand for more than 40 years by the late Tom Kearney, who clinched his reputation for honesty by paying off more than $100,000 in future book bets after Black Gold won the Kentucky Derby in 1924.

Oil-rich Texans and Oklahomans are the heaviest betters with Mr. Burke, transacting their wagers by telephone and telegraph, but he does not look down his nose at any bet, providing you accept the odds he lays. He has regular clients in Juneau, Alaska, in Halifax, and one steady customer in Koksilah, British Columbia. One American in San Juan, Puerto Rico, has bet with Burke for ten years.

His clientele, in one case, even extended within the walls of the Minnesota State Penitentiary at Stillwater, where a trusty with money at his command, wagered with Burke during the entire eight years of his sentence which ended a month ago. The other day, Burke received a $100 wager from the felow under an alias, but sharp-eyed clerks who had handled the trusty's former bets recognized the handwriting despite the fact that the fellow had been serving his time for forgery.

Baseball Business.

He used to do a thriving business in baseball bets, but now he has cooled toward that sort of odds-laying.

"Too many sharpshooters in that game," said Burke. "We laid the odds depending on who was scheduled to pitch for the teams, but we found out that there were too many last-minute switches in the pitchers. Smart Eastern betters knew that pitchers were going to be switched long before we knew it and we took a beating. We don't take any more big baseball bets except to accomodate regular customers."

In case you're interested, Mr. Burke is demanding 5 to 2 if you want to bet that Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong will beat Lou Ambers for the lightweight title this month. And if you want to bet that Ambers will beat Armstrong, he will lay you 4 to 1 Ambers does not.

He will also bet you that you can't call the flip of a coin. He'll give you your choice of heads or tails. But it won't be even money. It will be your five bucks against his four. That's what they call the bookmakers' percentage. The bookies don't deal in even-money bets. There's no profit in that for them!

Earl Averill Honored By 'Day' Receives Auto

Cleveland, Aug. 3 (AP).—It was "Averill day" in Cleveland Stadium today as the Indians played the Boston Red Sox a double-header.

Earl Averill, the Indians' centerfielder for ten years, was being honored by the fans for his work in leading American League batters for weeks. Averill received a $2,400 automobile as a present from the fans.

Yucatan Kid Signs to Box Sarron Here

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Aug. 3.—Capt. W. H. Peeples, manager of the Yucatan Kid, Southern lightweight champion and winner of 17 out of his last 18 bout, announced here tonight that his fighter had signed to meet Petey Sarron, of Birmingham, former world heavyweight champion, in the feature bout on the annual Washington (D. C.) police benefit show, October 3.

The bout, which will be for 15 rounds, has been officially designated as being for the Southern lightweight title and will be the Kid's first defense of his title since he won it from Norment Quarles on the Richmond police show last June.

The Kid, who hailed originally from Mexico City, and made his American debut in Miami last winter, has been campaigning out of Richmond during the summer and has added to his growing list of conquests with wins over Joey Straiges, Cowboy Scott, Quarles and Lloyd Pime in Richmond rings.

His most recent win was over Charley Gomer, in Baltimore, last night.

Capt. Peeples said that the bout with the veteran Sarron was a great opportunity for his young fighter, who recently turned 23, and that he would consider a victory over the crafty Petey as a stepping stone to a higher place in the lightweight ratings. Yucatan, since coming to America, has lost only one bout, this young Bobby Britton, son of the one time great welterweight champion, but Yucatan gave away nearly nine pounds in this bout.

Since this time he has not been beaten and has beaten Tommy Speigal, Norment Quarles (twice), Charley Gomer (twice), Cowboy Scott and nearly all the outstanding contenders in the lightweight ranks.

The date, Brown said, was mutually satisfactory to Promoter Joe Turner and Clark Griffith. He announced that the commission, which will act as matchmaker, had a bout tentatively arranged, but would not announce it until both parties are signed.

Previous shows have benefited the police department relief fund, but that practice was ordered stopped after two successful cards.

The commission also clarified its stand in the Pete Scalzo—Tony Dupre, return bout business which has muddled the atmosphere considerably. Dupre, the wrong man, won the bout, thereby disrupting Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn's well-meant featherweight elimination tournament.

Al Lefebvre, Dupre's manager, wrote to the governing body advising it that Ahearn told him that unless Dupre agreed to a re-match with Scalzo on August 15 he would be thrown out of the tournament. Lefebvre pointed out that he would accept the proposed match with alacrity after his fighter's badly gashed eyes were properly healed. Dupre he concluded, has been ordered by his physician to lay off until the first week in September.

In reply the commission dispatched the following epistle:

My Dear Mr. Lefebvre:

Replying to your letter of 2 August, please be advised that the commission did not order a return match between Dupre and Scalzo. It merely announced that it would favor such a match due to the criticism of the bout.

If Dupre's eye is not wholly healed, the commission agrees with you that the proper thing to do is to allow it to heal. This is just another instance of the importance of properly taking care of eyes during the progress of a bout.

While the commission agrees with the National Boxing Association that short eight-round bouts are not quite the thing for elimination purposes, the chairman of the N. B. A. ratings committee advises that, in making up the quarterly ratings, the committee must take its information where it finds it and that the Dupre-Scalzo result will be figured in the ratings as would also the result of a return match between these two contestants.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) ERNEST W. BROWN.
Chairman.

Pitt Drops Boxing And Wrestling

Pittsburgh, Aug. 3 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh, present champion of the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Conference, announced tonight it is abandoning both boxing and wrestling as intercollegiate sports.

Athletic Director James Hagan, who is president of the boxing conference, said the sports were being dropped because there wasn't enough student interest to justify them.

Tribe, Bosox Break Even In 2 Games

Boston Wins Opener, 4-3; Cleveland Takes 2d by 8-6 Score.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 3.—The Cleveland Indians divided a double-header with the Boston Red Sox here today in blistering heat before 35,000 fans, leaving Cleveland two games behind the first place New York Yankees and Boston six games behind.

Boston won the first game, 4 to 3, as Pitcher Jack Wilson maintained his jinx over the Tribe. Cleveland took the second, 8 to 6, with Earl Whitehill and Bob Feller hurling them to victory.

Fritz Ostermueller had to rescue Wilson in the eighth inning of the first game when the Indians scored twice to come within one of tying it up and had two men stranded on the bases.

The Red Sox bunched six of their nine hits in the first and third innings for three runs, and put over the wining tally in the fourth on two walks and a single off Mel Harder.

The Indians found their batting eyes in the second game and collected eight runs in six inings before Boston scored. The Red Sox rolled up six runs in the seventh inning, Whitehill giving way to Johnny Humphries and Feller coming to the rescue to end the scoring.

Earl Averill, Cleveland centerfielder, was presented with an automobile before the games in recognition of his ten years in baseball.

Everett easily defeated Thomas F. Scholl, of Glen Cove, N. Y., 6 and 4, and will meet Thomas A. Carrick, jr., of Baltimore in the semifinals this afternoon. Carrick disposed of Spencer Brainard, of New Haven, Conn., 2 up.

Antonio won from G. H. Dunlap, of Clemson, S. C., 4 and 2, and meets William Guynes, of Fountain City, Tenn., next. Guynes defeated Thomas J. Foley, of Worcester, Mass., 3 and 2.

5 English Net Players Sail for U. S. Events

London, Aug. 3 (AP).—Five tennis players, selected to represent Great Britain in the American championships, sailed aboard the Queen Mary today.

Kay Stammers, Margot Lumb, R. A. Shayes, Eric Filby and Team Captain George Patrick Hughes made up the party. Charles E. Hare, now living in the United States, will join the squad on its arrival.

Wee Willie Wilkin to Join Redskins Sunday

Wee Willie Wilkin, the 270-pound lad who may play tackle for the Redskins this season, is en route to Washington—finally, club officials announced yesterday, and probably will arrive Sunday night—weather permitting.

General Manager Jack Espey took the precaution of wiring Wilkin his ticket, rather than its price in cash, when Willie's first distress signals were heard from California. Even at that, Wilkin managed to board the wrong bus and get halfway to San Francisco, from Richmond, Calif., before discovering his error.

Meanwhile, Redskin headquarters reverberate with the team's new and official tune, "Fight On Redskins." With the words by Corrine Griffith and music by Barnee, the tune has been published in sheet form, and also recorded by the maestro's Shoreham orchestra.

If you haven't heard it—and it's really a catchy tune that you can march to, swing, tango or rhumba by, drop in at the office and any of the boys will be glad to whistle the patter.

Giants Beat Cubs, 8 to 3

Ott, Bartell, Mancuso, Seeds Hit Homers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 3.—The Giants broke out their home-run bats today and walloped the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 3, on a 12-hit attack featured by 4 round-trip clouts.

The victory evened the current series and dropped the Cubs 2½ games behind the second place New Yorkers in the National League race.

Bill Lee, who started for the Cubs, gave up five runs in the first three innings. Mel Ott accounted for the first two with his fourth homer in the first frame. Dick Bartell belted his eighth four-bagger in the second, followed by Gus Mancuso, who whacked his second. With Jack Russell pitching, Bob Seeds hit his sixth of the season in the sixth frame with a mate aboard.

Gutteridge Fastest Man in Majors

Brooklyn, Aug. 3 (AP).—Don Gutteridge, third baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals, was acclaimed fastest man in the National League tonight when a crowd of 35,000 saw him win an 80-yard dash against other survivors of a series of elimination heats staged by the Brooklyn Dodgers. He won $200 as first prize.

Gutteridge won by a margin of 4 yards from Brooklyn's Ernie Koy. Hershel Martin, of the Phillies, was third and Phil Cavaretta, of the Cubs, fourth in the final.

Johnny Mize, of the Cardinals, won a $50 first prize in a slugging contest that was another preliminary to the Dodger-Cardinal night game with a drive of 391 feet.

Gordon's Homer in 11th Helps Yankees Beat Tigers, 10 to 7

New Yorkers Stage 3-Run Rally to End Free-Hitting Game; Ruffing Hits for Circuit.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 3.—The New York Yanks kicked away leads of one to three runs three times today, but finally beat the Tigers 10 to 7 with a three-run rally in the eleventh inning, featured by Joe Gordon's fourteenth homer of the year.

After the Tigers tied the count with two runs in the ninth, the Yanks broke up the ball game at the expense of Harry Eisenstat in the second extra frame, when singles by Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey's fly scored one run and Gordon's round-tripper brought two more home.

The victory evened the current series and boosted the Yankees' edge in the American League to two full games over the Cleveland Indians.

A total of 32 hits were walloped by both sides, the Yanks collecting 17 of them.

The Yanks got away to a fast start with three runs in the first two innings, but the Tigers came back to tie it up in the third and go in front in the fifth. Ruffing's second homer of the year in the sixth again put the Yanks in front, but even that did no good against the Tigers' ninth-inning rally, which sent the game into overtime.

Greek Wins Unanimous Ring Verdict

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Steve Mamakos' stamina overcame Ivan Nedomatsky's widely publicized right hook last night at Griffith Stadium where the idol of Southwest Washington won an 8-round verdict over the Baltimore boy—and made it look easy.

Three times Nedomatsky's bruised and punch-weary frame fell to the canvas with the dull thud of a ripe plum falling from a tree, and three times he dragged himself up on intoxicated legs to punch back at the muscular southwest lad before him. From the second round on he was out of the running, but he gave the fans an exhibition of gameness, of futile courage that is burned indelibly in their memories.

Some 2,500 fans, about evenly divided in sentiment, saw the former University of Maryland star belted unmercifully by his opponent. They saw him staggering around on wobbly legs, peering dimly through the slit of one good eye, trying to fight back when his physical resources were spent. He was Ivan Nedomatsky, the Southern Conference lightweight and welterweight champion in the first round when he traded punch for punch with the Gilded Greek, staggered him with his vaunted right and made him give ground, but thereafter he was a sadly and badly beaten boy.

Down Twice in Sixth.

Twice in the sixth round, the first time water taking four consecutive right hooks to the jaw, Nedomatsky sagged to the canvas. He was not hurt, but merely exhausted. He no sooner landed than he came up on one knee and wisely took an eight-count. The second time Mamakos caught him off balance after Ivan missed with a right, and again he took eight.

But he was wobbly in the seventh, on the verge of sheer exhaustion from being pushed around and taking all his opponent had to offer, before hitting the carpet again. He could have quit then and there. Ringside fans clamored for him to stay down, but the heart—a champion's heart—goaded him into an upright posture and he came back fighting. The eventual winner was no little surprised and chagrinned at this display of courage.

Mamako's Surprise.

There was a look of surprised delight and excitement in his eye when Nedomatsky fell the first time, but when the former collegiate fighter refused to play dead the surprised look turned to one of dismay and consternation. The Greek fighter couldn't finish him—didn't know how to apply the finishing touch to a fighter a baby could have pushed over.

And in the seventh round the Southeast plodder was even more surprised when Ivan summoned up the last atom of energy in his weary body and exploded a left hook flush on his rival's mouth that staggered him, forced him to retreat. But the District lad stopped only momentarily. He spat blood and resumed his windmill flailing and finally halted the threatened rally by pushing Nedomatsky away, wearing him down with his continuous milling.

The scene recalled memories of Barney Ross being hammered from post to post by Henry Armstrong and still refusing to run up the white flag. Ross, one eye bulging and closed, completely at Armstrong's mercy and absorbing everything the dusky warrior had, but carrying on like a true champion. Nedomatsky looked like Ross last night—too courageous for his own good.

Weight Hurt Ivan.

Nedomatsky went into combat weighing an anemic 143¾ pounds to his foe's 147. It is doubtful if he would have fared much better had the fight been held Monday night, as scheduled, when there was only one pound difference in weights. But his manager's well planned strategy back-fired and his own fighter was the unintended victim.

The first round was the only one in which the bout could be referred to as a fight, and at the bell the lights in both corners were turned on, indicating that honors were evenly divided. But that was little balm for Nedomatsky, already tired and apparently fully aware of impending defeat. He staggered the Greek in the first with his left hooks to the body and right crosses to the head, but couldn't put him away—couldn't even put him down, and he realized the barrier of human flesh and bone before him was insurmountable.

Tony Ciaccio Wins.

Tough Tony Ciaccio, 152¼, mussed up Tommy Bland a bit and cut his eye slightly in the final round, but inflicted no serious damage in winning the nod in their eight-round semi-final. Bland gave away 5 pounds and tried gamely but ineffectively to stem his opponent's bull-like charges, but simply couldn't cope with him.

Oak Howie 135¾ District colored puncher, outpointed Willie Cooper, 142¼, of Baltimore, in the opening four rounder. Cooper took the first round with a surprising display of aggressiveness, but Howie rallied to take the last three and the decision.

Washington's long lost pugilistic son, Joey Green, came back last night, and with the proverbial bang, knocking out Lloyd Lasky, 134½ of New York, in 2:05 minutes of the second round. Green, 134¾, had all the best of it, clipping Lasky with a hard left in the first round that rendered him almost hors'd combat.

Brooks Bowen, 132, of Richmond, won a unanimous four-round verdict over Frankie Martini, 135, of Baltimore, in the final preliminary.

Browns Beat Nats, 5 to 3; Newsom Allows Six Hits

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Henry Sees Ghosts.

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Aug. 3.—Henry Armstrong, the little executioner, wouldn't mind if his fight with Lou Ambers for the lightweight championship of the world next Wednesday night were going to be staged in the Madison Square Garden Bowl, instead of at the Polo Grounds, but thereafter Homicidal Henry wants no part of the Bowl.

VIDMER.

"I don't know whether it's haunted — or what," said the young lad with the legs of a featherweight, the body of a welterweight, and titles in both divisions, "but maybe there's ghosts in there. Something must be wrong, because no champion ever has been successful in defending his title in the Bowl, and I don't want to try to do what nobody else has done."

This, of course, wasn't altogether consistent, for Henry will be trying to do something next Wednesday night that nobody else ever has done. He will be trying to win his third title in the span of a single year, and the prospects are that he will accomplish it. But we were on the subject of the haunted Bowl and the banshees that seem to prosper there, and Henry is not one to laugh off the idea with a mirthful chuckle.

"I saw ghosts twice," he volunteered, "and I don't want to have anything more to do with them. When I was a little kid my mother and dad lived in Mississippi. That was before the boll weevil chased us to St. Louis. And every evening my sister and I used to go out into the woods and gather branches together and make them into a broom and sweep up the yard. Well, one evening, my mother and dad were away and we didn't do it, but wnen they came back that night they made us get up and go get the branches to make our brooms.

Noises in the Night.

"It was mighty dark and kind of scary in those woods, and pretty soon we heard a noise. It sounded like a hog coming through the brush, but we stopped and listened and while we were standing there suddenly the sound changed and it was like a horse galloping. You know how a horse sounds coming down the road — tobacco-tobacco-tobacco-tobacco, like that, and then it stopped all at once and we looked over to the bridge that crossed a creek and it wasn't a horse at all. Not at first. It was a little dog standing there on the bridge looking at us.

"But while we looked back it started to grow bigger and bigger, and pretty soon it was a beautiful white horse. We were mighty scared and my sister said, Come on, let's run," but I couldn't run. I just stood there staring at it, and then it faded away, like in the movies.

"I know that sounds crazy, but it's true. I never have forgotten it. Neither has my sister, and if that wasn't a ghost I would like to know what it was."

Henry's other ghost was a vision at an upper window in his house. He steadfastly maintains that he was standing in the yard one day and looked up and there was his grandfather peering out the window at him, which wouldn't be such a strange thing except that, his grandfather had been dead a long time.

But so far none of his many victims have come back to haunt him. In fact, he seems on very friendly terms with the men he has knocked out. Perhaps that's just tact on the part of his victims, but a couple of them are up here helping Henry prepare for his battle with Ambers and he has no greater admirers than Lew Feldman and Chalky Wright, both of whom he has flattened in the ring.

One Weight, One Title.

There has been some discussion of how many titles will be at stake in the coming encounter between the man who holds the featherweight and welterweight crowns and the lad who carries the lightweight championship. The answer is quite simple. There will be only one title at stake—the lightweight which is being defended by Lou Ambers. It is only logical as the fighters have agreed to come into the ring under 135 pounds, the lightweight limit.

Ambers couldn't possibly win the featherweight championship by beating Armstrong at that weight because Ambers wouldn't be under the featherweight limit himself. Nor could he win the welterweight throne with the welterweight champion forced to make 135 pounds. A welterweight is allowed to weigh 147 pounds.

Of course, it isn't true in this case, but generally speaking the bigger a fighter is, the better he is. It might be true that a man who weighs 147 pounds would be helpless fighting at 135. If Joe Louis were forced to come into the ring under 160 pounds a middleweight might conceivably slaughter him, he would be so weakened, but that wouldn't mean that the middleweight had won the heavyweight title.

So unless Armstrong is allowed to make 147 pounds, which he wouldn't do even if he could, his welterweight championship cannot be on the line. And Ambers, failing to come under the featherweight limit, can't win Armstrong's other championship.

If Henry could choose to fight at any weight he wanted, he would come in between 133 and 134. That's when he feels that he is at his best. However, he has no doubt about his ability to make 126 pounds in order to defend his featherweight throne if necessary.

Griffs Lose But Retain 4th Position

Weaver and De Shong Unable to Stem St. Louis Hits.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, Aug. 3.—The Nats met up with their old pal, Buck Newsom, this hot afternoon and the pleasure was all Newsom's.

It was a very embarrassing nine innings for the Nats, who could register only six hits and a high degree of disgust at their futility against the fast ball of the big right-hander of the Browns.

The upshot was a 5-3 licking for the Nats, who retained fourth place only because over in Detroit Joe Gordon, of the Yankees, was hitting an eleventh-inning home run that beat the fifth-place Tigers.

Newsom Fans Ten.

Big Newson was a potent package today with his blazing fast ball. He struck out ten of the Washington athletes to approach the American League record for strikeouts in a single game this season. In the eighth and ninth innings he developed an impish grin and a positive passion for strikeouts.

That was when he struck out five Nats in a row. Rearing back with little regard for pitching form, but throwing all his strength into his pitches, he struck out Zeke Bonura, Cecil Travis, Goose Goslin, Buddy Myer and Pinch-Hitter Rick Ferrell before Pinch-Hitter Jimmy Wasdell interrupted the fanning bee by tapping a short fly to centerfield for the last out of the game.

The Browns, meanwhile, were fattening their averages against the pitching of Monte Weaver and Jimmy DeShong. Weaver's presence was tolerated only for three innings by Bucky Harris during which the Browns collected five hits and three runs. DeShong allowed six hits in five innings of toil.

Nats Never in Front.

The Nats never boasted any more than a draw at any time during the proceedings. And from the third inning, they were always trailing. In the last five innings, Newsom hung to his slender lead by limiting the Nats to two hits.

Weaver set the Browns up in a 1-0 lead at the start when, after getting two out, he pitched a double to Buster Mills and a single to Clift.

Newsom was perilously close to being removed from the game in the second inning when he pitched a single to Cecil Travis and then issued three straight walks to force over a run. But with the bases full and only one out, Weaver obligingly struck out and Case popped up.

The Browns knocked Weaver loose from a pair of runs to break the 1-1 tie in the third inning when Mel Almada, another ex-Nat led off the inning with a single to left that boosted his consecutive-game hitting to 19. McQuinn followed with a single and eventually big Beau Bell knocked the pair of runs across with a single to right.

Squeaky Inning.

The fourth was also a squeaky inning for Newsom, but the Nats muffed their big scoring chance. After Travis walked and West singled with none out, Myer forced West. Giuliani singled to score Travis and a rally appeared imminent with Taft Wright pinch-hitting for Weaver. But Myer managed to get himself picked off second base by Newsom and the uprising collapsed completely when Wright struck out.

Zeke Bonura presented the Browns with a run that made it 4-2 in their favor in the fifth. With McQuinn on second base and two out, Bonura made a miserable muff of Bell's foul pop, and Bell, the ingrate, singled to center to score McQuinn.

The Nats made it 4-3 in the sixth when Travis walked and Buddy Myer doubled with two out, but Harlan Clift matched that run all by himself in the seventh inning when he walloped one of DeShong's pitches for his fifteenth home run of the season, a terrific blast into the leftfield seats.

But that run was entirely superfluous, what with Newsom out there making simians out of the Nats with his five strikeouts in the eighth and ninth.

Heffner Safe at 2d on DeShong's Error

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The Senators' pitcher was charged with an error yesterday when he threw wild to Cecil Travis at second on what appeared to be an easy force play. Heffner, Browns second baseman, was safe as Travis had to stretch too far for the ball.

Mrs. Andrus, Mme. Henrotin Win in Maidstone Net Event

By the Associated Press.

East Hampton, N. J., Aug. 3.—Led by the top-seeded duo of Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, four of the Nation's best women's doubles teams moved into the semifinal round of the Maidstone Club's invitation tennis tournament today.

Following the favorites into the penultimate braket were Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, of Boston, and Katharine Winthrop, of Manchester, Mass.; Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., and Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco; and Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Dorothy Workman, of Los Angeles.

The singles quarterfinals, originally slated for today, were postponed to give the competitors a rest after yesterday's play under a hot sun. The proposal apparently met with little favor, for most of the leading players were on the courts in the two rounds of doubles competition.

Mrs. Andrus and Mme. Henrotin disposed of Laura Morgan, of Tuscon, Ariz., and Jean Burritt, of Toronto, 6—2, 6—2, in their first round match, and then erased Florence Le Boutillier, of Old Westbury, N. Y., and Anne Page, of Philadelphia, 6—2, 6—4, in their quarterfinal round match.

Mrs. Johnson and Miss Winthrop, a dark horse team as far as this tournament of prominent internationalists is concerned, defeated the strong team of Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex., and Sissie Madden, of Boston, 6—1, 6—1, in their first match and then conquered the Southampton pair of Mrs. John Lawrence and Cathleen Fox, almost as easily, 6—2, 6—3, to gain the semifinals.

Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Wolfenden breezed through two matches, beating Argyl Rice, of Hartford, Conn., and Catharine Sample, of Miami, Fla., 6—0, 6—2, and then Theodosia Smith, of Los Angeles, and Patricia Cumming, of Westfield, N. J., 6—2, 6—1.

Miss Bundy and Miss Workman found the going tough in both their matches. They were forced to extra games twice in opening match, defeating Barbara Winslow, of Hollywood, Calif., and Marilyn McRae, of Little Rock, Ark., 7—5, 9—7, and then went to three sets to beat Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, and Jane Stanton, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4.

Ingram Faces Foran Tomorrow Night.

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Giants tonight announced the purchase of John Wittig, 22-year-old right-hand fastball pitcher, from the Baltimore Orioles of the International League.

The deal was a straight cash transaction. Wittig, who pitched for Dover, Del., of the Eastern Shore League last season, will report to the Giants tomorrow.

Wittig has won ten and lost nine so far this year. He is the second Baltimore player purchased by the Giants in a week, the National Leaguers having acquired Second Baseman Bill Cissell Monday.

161 Entries Set For U. S. Amateur

New York, Aug. 3 (U.P.).—The United States Golf Association announced tonight that 161 entries had been received for the amateur championship, with the deadline nine days off.

Entries for the championship, to be played September 12 to 17, over the Oakmont (Pa.) Country Club course, will be accepted at the U. S. G. A. office here until 5 p. m., Friday, August 12.

Among the entries are Charley Yates, British amateur titleholder, of Atlanta, and the defending champion, Johnnny Goodman, of Omaha. Foreign players entered include T. A. Torrnace and Brig. Gen. A. C. Critchley, of England, and Harry Hattersley, of Australia. Former champions entered, in addition to Goodman, are Charles Evans, jr., winner in 1916 and 1920; R. David Herron, 1919; Jess W. Sweetser, 1922, and Max R. Marston, 1923.

Split Doubleheader.

With Louis Ricucci on the mound, Langley's softball team won the first game of a double-header yesterday over the New York Playground ten, 2-0. The nightcap was captured by the Playground lads, 7-4.

Michigan Park Wins.

Miami Net Teams Advance at Southampton

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Two unseeded Miami doubles combinations provided all the thrills in the opening rounds of the Forty-eighth Annual Meadow Club Invitation Grass Court Tournament today as they eliminated two seeded teams and advanced into the quarterfinal round.

The first upset was recorded by the newly-formed duo of George Toley and Gardnar Mulloy, who ousted the second-seeded Murphy twins, Bill and Chester, of Chicago, 2—6, 6—1, 6—2, in a fast second-round encounter. The Murphys gave some indication of being off form in their first-round match against Charles Hare, of England, and Lawrence Condon, of Southampton, but Toley and Mulloy would have trimmed anybody today.

The second Miami conquest was registered by Martin Buxby and Charles Harris, who defeated J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., and reGgory Mangin, of New York, 9—7, 6—2, and joined their townsmen in the bracket of eight.

The two other seeded teams came through with little difficulty. Top-seeded Sidney Wood, of New York, and Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, dropped only one set in two matches. Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, won in straight sets.

The match that drew the most attention, however, was that between Mort Ballagh and Verne Hughes, of Los Angeles, and Bobby Harman and Frank Kovacs, of California, which Kovacs and Harman captured, 7—5, 5—7, 6—4.

Ballagh and Hughes entered the tournament after having cleaned up five championships on the Pacific Coast and in the Middle West. They toyed with the strong team of Doug Imhoff and Robert Peacock, of Los Angeles, in their first round match, but against Kovacs and Harman they were erratic, especially in their net play.

The team of Frank Shields and Bob Kamrath was eliminated in the second round by Frank Guernney, jr., of Orlando, Fla., and Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, 3—6, 7—5, 8—6.

Other quarter-finalists are Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, and Hal Surface, of Kansas City, Mo., and Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, and Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C.

But tomorrow both the doubles and sigles quarter-finals will be contested.

Bucs Shell 5 Bee Hurlers to Win Double-Header, 9 to 4 and 5 to 3

Leaders Get 28 Safeties In 2 Games

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 3.—Rapping out a total of 28 hits the Pittsburgh Pirates overcame both the Boston Bees and 95-degree heat in two contetss today, 9 to 4 and 5 to 3, to widen their National League lead to 5½ games.

Though the Bees couldn't get to Cy Blanton with any success in the opener, the heat finally did, and the Pirates' ace hurler left the box at the end of the seventh while leading 7-4. However, he received credit for the victory and became the first Pirate hurler to win eight games in a row, a figure neither Bob Klinger nor Mace Brown could reach, although each won seven straight earlier this year.

The heat also forced Lee Handley, Pittsburgh third baseman, to quit in the eighth inning of the nightcap, Brubaker taking his place.

All the Bostonians could cheer about was the performance of their new third baseman, Joe Stripp, who, in his debut here after being purchased from the St. Louis Cardinals, rapped out four hits in eight times up, one of them a double.

Paced by Al Todd, who got four out of five, the Bucs knocked the props from under Jim Turner in the second inning of the first game. They added 12 more hits off Relief Pitcher Ira Hutchinson, for a total of 18, while Mace Brown, who relieved Blanton, held the Bees safely over the final innings.

Again, in the second game, neither starting pitcher could finish. Russ Bauers went out in the fifth, when the Bees filled the bases with one out, but Bowman, who relieved Bauers, got away with only one run being scored against him.

Miles River Races Today

Dance Will Open Best Regatta in 17 Years.

By the Associated Press.

St. Michaels, Md., Aug. 3.—The Miles River Yacht Club's dance tomorrow will open the biggest regatta in the 17 years the racing program has been held here.

Officials said they had not finished adding up the entries, but already there were more than ever before. Everything from 10-foot dinghies to 225-cubic inch hydroplanes will have a special event.

One event will be a parade of 150 boats of the United States Power Squadron, an organization of amateur yachtsmen. A description of this will be broadcast from the committee boat.

The entertainment committee of the club will be on hand tomorrow night to make the visitors feel at home and the racing will begin at 10 a. m. Friday with a contest for chance work boats. The committee said it was scheduling workboat races "in the hope of reviving the old spirit of rivalry among waterman which contributed to the beginning of the regatta."

The race of Chesapeake Bay log canoes for the Governor's Cup will be held Saturday. Earlier there will be two other canoe events—one for craft built before 1917 and the other for boats built since that time.

Steve Casey Defends Title Against Ernie Dusek in Griffith Stadium Feature Tonight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Steve Casey, mighty man of the mat who seems to have established a permanent claim to the Bowser Bros. (Ltd.) wrestling championship, lugs his title into the ring again tonight at Griffith Stadium for a bout with Ernie Dusek that threatens to provide the fans with the first legitimate wrestling they have seen since Rob Roy Mackey dropped the duke to his wrestling bear a half century ago.

As an added attraction the management hoped to have Doug (my error) Corrigan, who made the now-famous wrong-way solo flight to Ireland, as guest of honor at Griffith Stadium, where the festivities will be held. Corrigan was supposed to arrive in New York today—by boat. Yesterday aboard the S. S. Manhattan he received a cablegram from Casey inviting him to attend and see Dusek pinned, but it is doubtful if he'll be able to make it.

The largest audience of the outdoor campaign is expected to see Casey work on Dusek, and if advance performances are a criterion it will be a worthwhile engagement. Dusek, suddenly stricken with a desire to play the game square, pinned Danno O'Mahoney and Cliff Olson in successive weeks without resorting to so much as a blackjack. And he pinned 'em the hard way after absorbing an unwholesome quantity of punishment.

Casey supporters, however fear that Ernie's suddenly acquired virtue is merely a ruse to throw the burly Irishman off guard. They reason that once he has convinced the titleholder of his sincerity he'll immediately turn on him and probably bite off an ear, or gouge an eye or two.

Hence, Casey comes to town forewarned, which, as old Sing Song Lee, the Chinese philosopher would admit, is forearmed. Whatever he is, Casey will need all of it tonight against the Ukrainian, for Dusek is not the kind of a gent you'd care to meet up a dark alley. He goes berserk frequently, and flies into violent rages—usually rather tough on the opposition. All of which makes it unusually difficult to explain his choir-boy tactics against O'Mahoney and Olson.

A new and strictly "neuter" referee, Willie Clark, of Philadelphia, will officiate in the main bout. Jack Albright, Casey's manger, complained of Referee Benny Bortnick's mathmatics, alleging he employed the Arabic system of counting in which all even numbers are skipped. As Casey takes a full "two-count," much like a boxer taking "nine," Albright pointed out that Bortnick's quick-count might get him into serious difficulty.

Bob Johnson 5 Safeties in 6 Tries, Including Pair of Homers.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Philadelphia's Athletics padded their batting averages today by battering four Chicago White Sox pitchers for 34 hits and victories in both games of a doubleheader, 14 to 2 and 13 to 5.

Bob Johnson, of the Athletics, hit his nineteenth home run of the season in the first inning of the first game with a mate on base and then, in the ninth, banged out his twentieth with the bases full. He contributed five hits in six times at bat off Johnny Whitehead and Rookie Harry Boyles, to head an 18-hit assault.

Johnny Rigney and Frank Gabler were nicked for 16 hits in the second game, with Earl Brucker's third homer of the season pacing the Mackmen's attack. George Caster allowed the Sox only two hits until the seventh.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

No member of the Nats distinguished himself to any great degree yesterday as they took a beating from the Browns in St. Louis. But their performances, such as they were, lead to the following point awards in the Man of the Month club.

To Buddy Myer, four points, because he made one of the Nats' six hits and doubled, driving in a run.

To Angelo Giuliani, four points, because in three times at bat he walked and singled and drove in a run.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because in four times at bat he walked twice, singled and scored a run.

The Score.

Novelty Swim Races Are Held In Rosedale Playground Meet

Fan Race, Balloon Race and Night-Shirt Relay Thrill Youngsters; Orthodox Events Also Staged.

Novelty races such as the fan race, the balloon race and the night-shirt relay featured the Northeast sectional swimming meet held yesterday at Rosedale Playground pool. This was the first in a series of eight girls sectional meets to be staged throughout the city.

In addition to the orthodox and novelty races, a series of demonstrations showing the value of the swimming instruction being taught on the playgrounds was put on.

A large and enthusiastic crowd of youngsters jammed the colorfully decorated pool to cheer favorites. The novelty races were particularly appealing to the crowd. In the fan race, the lassies splashed through the water carrying fans in their right hands, which they used vigorously throughout the hot race. Betty Thomas won this unusual event.

Lena Guntow and Margaret Millbrandt won the nightshirt relay in which the girls donned large white nightshirts, swam the length of the pool, climbed out, exchanged shirts, then swam back to the starting point. This is the first time this race has been held in a playgrounds meet here and it proved a popular innovation.

The feet-tied race also drew applause. In this race, the girls swam with both feet tightly bound. Jean Milbrandt was the winner after a furious churning which delighted the youthful crowd.

Officials were Maude N. Parker and Mildred Robertson, assisted by Mrs. Kathryn Ladd, Dorothy French and Ann Gaither. Today's sectional meet will be held at Georgetown pool at 2 o'clock.

Frank Parker, Allison Enter Quarter-Finals

Toronto, Aug. 3 (AP).—Two stars of the international tennis wars, Frankie Parker and Wilmer Allison, led the way into the quarter-final round of the Canadian singles championship today.

Parker went through two brilliantly played sets to eliminate Bruce Hall, of Toronto, 6—0, 6—1, while Allison disposed of Bob Madden, of Detroit, 6—4, 7—5, in two hectic sets in which the veteran from San Antonio, Tex., scored consistently on shots from the net.

Circle-X Granted National Charter

The Circle-X Rifle and Pistol Club of this city has been granted a charter by the National Rifle Association, the national governing body of the sport of rifle shooting, according to an announcement made today at headquarters of the association here.

The officers are Dr. Grant Lucas, 2900 Thirteenth street northeast, president; Dr. James E. Walker, 504 T street northwest, vice president; Montgomery W. King, 2719 Georgia avenue northwest, secretary; Frank Coleman, 41 Quincy place northwest treasurer, and Lieut. Col. Henry C. Atwood, 1317 T street northwest, executive officer.

The club is one of 3,000 active rifle and pistol shooting clubs affiliated with the National Rifle Association.

Breaks Pitching Arm During Wind-Up!

Medina, Tenn., Aug. 3 (AP).—Speed-ball Jake Slaughter, of the Zion Hill Billies, figured today he'd have to change his wind-up if he's to continue his career as a pitcher.

With a 3-to-0 lead over the Webb Farmers in the sixth inning, he broke his pitching arm by banging it against his head during the process of getting ready to throw his fast one. It stopped the game, for Slaughter was his team's only pitcher.

Sheppard Sees Penalty Back On Election Act

Holds Supreme Court Test Possible for Sharp Corrupt Practice Bill.

Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, chairman of the special Senate committee on campaign expenditures, yesterday thought it possible that information received so far from Senate candidates would lead to restoring the penal clause to the corrupt practices act and to testing it out before the Supreme Court.

Following the holding by the Supreme Court in the Newberry election case that there could be no penalty imposed by the act against a candidate in a State primary, the present act was passed in 1925, eliminating the penal clause.

Only Tuesday the committee, discussing Kentucky primary elections, found that adherents of Senator Alben W. Barkley and of Gov. A. B. Chandler, alike, had contributed to "a deplorable situation" which should "arouse the conscience of the country."

Supporters of Senator Barkley, the committee found, had made organized efforts to control the relief vote, while both factions were requiring contributions from the salaries of job holders in the State.

Tennessee Goes the Limit.

Last week the committee found that in the Senate race in Tennessee "apparently every scheme and questionable device that can be used in a political contest to raise funds to influence votes and control the election is in full swing."

Representative Robert Low Bacon (Republican), of New York, took occasion yesterday to comment on the committee statement.

"This committee regards the situation as so serious," said Representative Bacon, "that it has implied that the victory of the successful candidate may be challenged when he comes to claim his seat. It would be ironical if Senator Barkley, after being declared the winner, should be denied his Senate seat because of the scandalous playing of politics with human misery."

The New York Congressman went on to list the attempts made by Republicans to avoid the possibility of this "deplorable situation" by remedial legislation, all of which was overridden by Democratic votes. Senator Barkley took a leading part in defeating the Austin amendment to the spending-lending bill, providing for criminal penalties for relief administrators who played politics.

Makes Morality An Issue.

"It is becoming increasingly evident," Representative Bacon continued, "that public morality and protection of the 'right of the people to a free and unpolluted ballot' are becoming major issues of this year's campaign. Let the Democrats meet that issue. Let Mr. Roosevelt undertake to defend what the Senate committee has denounced."

It became known also that Senator Barkley and Gov. Chandler would be required to supplement the information which they have already supplied the committee concerning their contributions and expenditures.

Senator Barkley failed to give any amount for contributions received by others in his behalf. He merely filled in the blank by saying that "various county headquarters" had raised $1,915 personally and to the expenditure of only $2,180 on his campaign, all for traveling expenses.

The committee has taken careful note of a phrase in the Chandler return of the questionnaire stating he has not received contributions or gifts or anything of value in behalf of his campaign "from the State of Kentucky." Inquiry will be made as to what contributions he may have received from without the State. The Kentucky Governor denied absolutely that he had any knowledge or had given consent for others to receive contributions for him.

Movie Censors Board Nets $16.090 for Year

Richmond, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—The State Board of Motion Picture Censors turned over a $16,090.15 profit to Virginia for the year ended June 30, an increase of $2,289.25 over the previous year.

Total income for the year was $37,732 and expenses $21,642. Four films were rejected of 1,501 viewed.

V.F.W. Hunting Office Space In Washington

National Headquarters Now in Kansas City, Group Seeks Relocation.

Possibility that Washington may become the headquarters for another national organization was seen yesterday as William J. Grace, of Chicago, representing the Veterans of Foreign Wars, interviewed local real estate men concerning office space.

WILLIAM J. GRACE.

The V. F. W., numbering 500,000, maintains its national office in Kansas City at present, Grace explained. Last year Eastern delegations to the annual encampment in Buffalo, N. Y., introduced a resolution to transfer the headquarters to Washington.

Grace was named head of a relocation committee of six to investigate the Capital as the site of the national office. He will report to the veterans at their encampment in Columbus, Ohio, August 21 to 25.

"We already have three departments here in Washington, and it probably would be advisable to bring the rest East," he explained. "It would save communication costs and speed up transaction of business.

Grace's committee is considering both "tangible and intangible" aspects of the proposed move. He said he was convinced that from the historic and the patriotic angles, Washington is highly desirable. Such "tangibles" as rent and wages for their office staff of 100 also must be taken into consideration, he added.

Grace told Executive Director Curtis Hodges of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade yesterday that the V. F. W. probably will bring their encampment of 20,000 men to Washington within three or four years.

Johnson to Tour Alaska on Aerial Inspection Trip

The importance of Alaska in the American scheme of defense was re-emphasized yesterday as it was learned Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson will make an aerial inspection tour of the territory late this month.

Describing his projected journey as "routine," Johnson said he expected to leave about August 15. He added that some consideration also would be given to the development of a road from the American Northwest through Canada to Alaska. At present the only route is by water, but an airline is considering establishment of regular service.

The Navy already has placed an air station in operation at Sitka, and has plans ready for construction of a $5,000,000 base at Kodiak. A military aviation base in Alaska was authorized in the 1936 Wilcox act.

Objections to the development of aviation facilities in Alaska have been based on the fact that Japanese concern might be aroused.

Funeral Today For Mrs. Pollock

Funeral services for Mrs. Lillian Grace Pollock, wife of Dr. Joseph Pollock, dentist, will be held at the Gawler undertaking establishment today at 10:30 a. m., with burial in Thurmont, Md.

Mrs. Pollock, who was 60 and had lived in Washington 45 years, died Tuesday at her home, 1448 Greenwich Parkway northwest, after an illness of three weeks. She was born in Frederick, Md. She was a garden enthusiast, and was active in the Society of Little Gardens of Foxhall Village.

Surviving are her husband and two sons, Harry B. and Donald B. Pollock, both of Washington.

Court Denies Stay In Stockyard Case

By the United Press.

Associate Justice Pierce Butler, of the Supreme Court, yesterday denied a petition by the F. O. Morgan Sheep Commission Co. for a stay of further proceedings by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace in the controversial Kansas City stockyards case.

The commission men thus have until August 15 to file exceptions to purported findings of fact issued by Wallace June 2, after the Supreme Court held that his original procedure in determining proper payments to them had been defective.

TVA Used Million To Promote Soil Work in 5 Years

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 3 (AP).—The TVA's agricultural relations department has spent $1,705,237 in the past five years to promote soil conservation work and distribution of phosphate fertilizer in seven Southern States, Department Director J. C. McAmis testified today before the Congressional investigation committee.

McAmis said his department had contracts with land grant colleges in Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia and that total expenditures for all purposes totaled $2,413,722.

Wheat Reacts After Advance On War Fears

Larger European Crop Is a Hinderance to Top Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, August 3.—Almost 1½ cents a bushel climb of Chicago wheat values today resulted largely from fears expressed that Russo-Japanese conflicts might draw other nations in. Late reactions, however, virtually canceled gains.

Setbacks from top prices were more or less due to an authoritative estimate that Europe's crops this season would be the largest since 1933, totaling about 30,000,000 bushels in excess of a 7-year average. Another drag on market upturns was that unofficial forecasts here indicated 1938 wheat production in the Canadian prarie provinces would be somewhat larger than had recently been looked for.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ½ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish, September, 67⅞@67½. December, 69@69⅛; corn, ¼@1¼ down; September, 54⅝@54¾; December, 52@52⅛; oats unchanged to ¼ off, rye showing ⅜@⅞, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to 7 cents advance.

Stocks Close Lower in Irregular Trading as Traders Await Definite Trend for Fall.

New York, Aug. 3.—Another day was added to the current run of irregular sessions today as traders sat back to await more positive evidence of what fall business may have to offer. Trading was moderate, only 817,160 shares changing hands, and an average loss of 0.22 point took away nearly half of the progress made on Tuesday. Public utility and manufacturing groups had their strong spots and the vast majority of fluctuations were of less than a point, there being no unusual pressure to sell.

Rails edged lower when it became apparent that the long conferences in Chicago between the railroads and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen had failed to bring forth any agreement on the proposal to reduce wages by 15 per cent.

Conference Deadlock.

The question now must be mediated and the prospect is for long drawn out discussions before any compromise can be arranged. It was not a surprise that the Chicago conference ended in a deadlock, but it was a disappointment nevertheless. New York Central was the most active of the rail issues and sold down ⅝.

Disturbed political conditions in Europe and the more serious turn of affairs in the Russo-Japanese conflict contributed to another excited day in the foreign exchange market and to another sharp decline in Japanese bonds, but domestic securities were not affected. The dollar was strong, with sterling at a new low in dollar terms for the last 16 months as bar gold reached its highest in more than a year in the London market.

There appeared to be no letup in the flight of capital into gold for hoarding purposes. The turnover in gold bullion at the price-fixing hour amounted to £2,977,000, the largest for any day in the currency crises of recent years.

War Fears Help.

Metal and aviation stocks enjoyed a period of firmness, as did certain oil issues, and part of the buying doubtless could be traced to fears of a major conflict, but in general these issues sold down later with the balance of the market. Best prices of the day came early in the session and the close was near the lowest for the period.

General Motors was the most active stock and along with Yellow Truck and Chrysler it gave up a good fraction. United States Rubber sold down 1½. Active oils included Richfield, Consolidated and Socony-Vacuum, all down small amounts.

Gold Shares Buoyant.

Gold shares were buoyed by the rush for the bar metal in London. Alaska Juneau, Dome and MacIntyre were up fractions while Homestake added nearly 2 points. National Steel stood out against the downward trend shown by other members of this division, United States Steel dropping 1⅜ and Bethlehem a point.

Clashes between Russian and Japanese units brought a rally to the wheat market, prices at one time being up nearly 1½ cents a bushel, but this gain was virtually eliminated later on authoritative estimates that the European crops this season will be the largest since 1933. The close in Chicago was unchanged to ½-cent higher. Cotton went to new lows for the move on foreign and domestic liquidation. Traders are awaiting the bureau crop estimate which will be out next Monday. Losses were held to 3 to 5 points.

Steel Output Up 3 Points to 40% Capacity

Wage Cut in Midwest Plant May Lead to New Reductions.

New York, Aug. 3.—Steel production this week rose three points to 40 per cent of capacity, the highest rate in almost nine months, as many leading producing centers reported stronger mill schedules and evidence accumulated that output will reach still higher levels this fall, says Iron Age in its weekly summary of the industry.

"Meanwhile a cut in wages ranging to 25 per cent has been declared by a Midwest steel manufacturer employing about 700 men, bringing nearer to a head the wage controversy which for the last month has been stirring the steel industry and other industries which follow its leadership in establishing pay rates. Lodge leaders of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, an affiliate of John L. Lewis' S. W. O. C., have agreed to the reduction at the Midwest plant, causing immediate speculation as to whether the larger companies, as a competitive move, will not immediately slash wages.

"As a result of the wage reduction, this week found the S. W. O. C. fighting against reports that it was trying to freeze wage rates at or above present levels and at the same time make agreement with "preferred" producers by which wages are being cut. And last week Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, said that his company had not discussed wages with the men and was not considering restoration of prices.

Quarter Losses Expected.

"While ingot output is higher and in some other phases the steel industry shows statistical gains, indications of a leveling off in ingot output during August are found in a decline in inquiries and widespread vacation shutdowns in steel consuming plants. Optimism within the trade is more restrained than a week ago, many producers having decided that profits will be more elusive in the third quarter and that losses for that period may top second quarter deficits despite a higher rate of output.

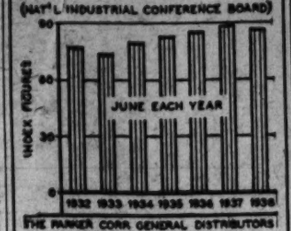
"Of the large steel consumers the automobile industry appears in the best position, with the largest companies reporting a heavy decline in inventories. Sales of 1939 models are now expected to begin weeks before the automobile shows, and in some cases new cars are likely to be on the road by October 1. Virtually all automobile manufacturers are expected to enter the market for steel by August 15. Heavier than expected, retail sales have cleaned out stocks of used cars at some points and are cutting into remaining stocks of 1938 models, spurring this industry's plans for 1939.

Insurance Stocks Set New High During July

New York, Aug. 3.—Insurance stocks in the New York City market reached another new high during July, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster. Weighted average of 20 issues rose from Month's low of 48.91 on July 5 to the new 1938 high of 51.31 on July 25. This compares with previous high of 49.06 on June 29 and marks the highest levels reached since September 9 last year.

New York City bank stocks also maintained steady levels during the month the report stated. After opening July 1 at 43.21, the weighted average of 17 leading issues declined slightly to month's low of 42.67 on July 8. Late in the month, a rally developed which carried through the June high to reach 44.82. At the close, however, the list eased off to 43.39, for a small net gain on the month.

Living Costs Drop 2.5% Under Year Ago



Boston, Aug. 3.—The cost of living of wage earners in June was down 2½ per cent from a year ago, and nearly 13 per cent lower than in June, 1929. Compared with a year ago, food was down 7 per cent, clothing down 4 per cent, while coal prices and rents were up just slightly.

Retail Trade Continues Rise

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department saw on the business horizon yesterday "definite signs" of expansion in consumer purchasing. It also noted a healthier inventory situation in both the retail and capital goods divisions.

Richard C. Patterson, jr., assistant secretary, said a midyear summary of retail trade showed that the June tendency toward better retail conditions was further strengthened in July.

July sales figures are incomplete, he said, but afford enough information to indicate that consumer buying will improve sooner than had been anticipated.

A study of available figures indicated that the large quantity of merchandise accumulated in the latter part of 1936 and early 1937 has gradually been liquidated and that for some lines, stock levels are back again to normal.

Ten Are Indicted By SEC for Fraud

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday reported that the Federal Grand Jury in Chicago, Ill., has indicted ten individuals and a corporation in connection with the distribution of the stock of Mineral Mining Co. in violation of the mail fraud statute and the securities act of 1933.

Those indicted were: Victor de Villiers, Edward Schofs, Arthur L. Rosenfeld, alias Rose; Samuel J. Lewis, Oscar Mohr, alias A. J. Morse; Murray H. Heitel, H. B. Keller, alias B. H. Krell; Morton Lewis, Charles Stearns, alias Stearks; Max Manners, alias Mann; and Victor deVilliers Staff, Inc., a Delaware corporation.

Railroad Employment Sets 18-Year Low

By the Associated Press.

Railroad employment reached a long-time low of 905,573 workers in May.

In that month, the Interstate Commerce Commission said yesterday, class 1 railways had a payroll of $138,698,266. The ICC's index, based on employment during the 1923-25 period, fell to 50.1 per cent, the lowest yet in statistics dating back to 1920.

H. L. Choate Agency Maintains Average

Newark, N. J., Aug. 3.—In a single day, representatives of the H. L. Choate agency of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., 925 Fifteenth street, turned in 22 applications for $107,500 of insurance, according to a report today from the company's home office at Newark, N. J.

On the same day Mutual Benefit agencies in all parts of the Nation were flooded with applications for nearly $4,000,000 of insurance, the largest single day's business in the company's history.

A. M. A. Doctor Outlines Health Stand to G.O.P.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—A member of the American Medical Association said today "there should be some health insurance scheme to assist the middle income group, so long as it is not a plan subsidized by the Federal Government."

Dr. H. L. Snyder, of Winfield, Kans., one of the physicians called for consultation on the medical care problem by the Republican Program Committee, expressed that view in outlining his stand on the topic.

"Medical care of the indigent group is the problem of the local community, the medical profession, the dental profession, pharmacists and nurses," he added. "The medical profession is not dodging its responsibility in caring for the indigent. The time has come when better provision by local governments must be made."

He estimated 90 per cent of the association's members devoted between one-fourth and one-third of their time to service without pay.

Previously, Dr. John P. Peters, of Yale University, member of a committee of physicians frequently at odds with the association on the problem, said the association's attitude toward co-operative health groups was "blocking valid experiments that should at least be completed before it determined whether they are good or bad."

"Pump" Needs Repair.

A forum conducted by the program committee concluded that Government spending as a means of inducing permanent recovery of private enterprise has been a "complete failure."

James H. Douglas, jr., of Chicago, leader of the discussion of financial policies, reported the participants agreed that the "principal New Deal approach" to the problem of recovery was "spending" and arrived at these conclusions:

"Pump priming does not produce effective results unless the pump itself is repaired.

"Spending should be limited to essential relief, and, possibly in a period of declining private enterprise, to useful public works, but any such spending must necessarily be accompanied by aggressive attempts to correct economic maladjustments."

Jay N. (Ding) Darling, president of the National Wild Life Federation and former chief of the United States Biological Survey, told the committee that:

"At least 3,000,000 men now unemployed could be rehabilitated at permanent, healthful and profitable employment if the abandoned farms, whose soil is exhausted, the dust bowl, the forests and the commercial fishing resources were back where they were in 1900."

He told the group an inventory of the country's resources should be taken in the light of current and future needs.

"At least 40 States expend the funds appropriated for conservation purposes in desultory and unstudied projects largely dictated by the temporary expedients of benefiting the political party in power," Darling said. "Generally speaking, there is no conservation program existing in these United States."

Rackets Grip Cities.

"The need of political machines for ever more money and ever more jobs makes them welcome the racketeer with open arms. As a result of these conditions, almost every large city in America is in the grip of rackets."

As a remedy, he suggested the election of "unbossed" prosecutors who have the ability to set up a "relentless and effective" law enforcement machine after the fashion of the racket-ruining District Attorney of New York County, Thomas E. Dewey.

Rivers added:

"What the Federal Government should do about rackets within a State is a problem presented today by the State of New Jersey. Frank Hague (Mayor of Jersey City) has become such a political colossus as to be able to . . . substitute a personal one-man rule for democratic government . . . The Federal authorities in New Jersey should help the citizens of that State break this Hague dictatorship."

Wills Eye to Pastor

MRS. MARGARET CARR, 80, who died at Berkeley, Calif., willed an eye to the Rev. U. E. Harding, of Portland, Oreg., who long has been seeking a cornea donor. The cornea already has been transplanted to an eye of the blind pastor.

Perfect Score Shot in District By New Yorker

In the third annual Treasury small arms shoot, L. E. Echols, of the New York customs force, scored 300 out of a possible 300 points with a .32-caliber revolver—the first perfect score in the history of competition.

Thanks to Echols and other bull's-eye experts, the customs unit won the competition for the third successive year and held on to the silver cup presented by Secretary Morgenthau.

The customs team scored 1,463 out of a possible 1,500 points. White House police were second with 1,460, and the mint third with 1,445. Other scores for the five-men teams were:

Alcohol Tax Unit, 1,429; Secret Service, 1,423; Treasury and Bureau of Engraving guards, 1,417; Narcotics, 1,384; Internal Revenue, 1,329; Public Health Service, 1,256.

The White House police team, all of Washington, shot as follows: R. G. Ford, 297; J. J. Cash, 288; R. L. Warden, 291; H. W. Francis, 290, and R. P. Hallion, 294.

Scores registered by the Alcohol Tax Unit were: A. L. Maloche, Phoenix, Ariz., 293; K. A. Wilson, San Francisco, 284; J. M. Schooley, Denver, 289; L. D. Parker, Denver, 280, and John Alles, Los Angeles, 283.

Mrs. Lois Freeland, Killed in N. Y. Fall, To Be Buried Here

Mrs. Lois Webb Freeland, 24, formerly of Washington, was killed in a five-story fall from her New York City apartment window Monday, it was announced here yesterday. She was the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Webb, of 4526 Hawthorne street, Wesley Heights.

Services will be held at 10 a. m. today at the home of her parents. Burial, which will be private, will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Sister of Thomas D. Webb, jr., former University of Maryland football star and amateur golfer, Mrs. Freeland had lived in New York since her marriage last year to Henry Theodore Freeland, a broker.

It was explained yesterday at Dr. Webb's home that Mrs. Freeland stumbled over a stool in her kitchen and fell through an open window.

Mrs. Freeland was a graduate of Western High School and of the Cathedral School for Girls.

Buried Ice Found.

Mount Carmel, Pa., August 3 (AP). A perspiring steam-shovel crew had to stop work today because the scoop struck ice. The huge block, estimated to weigh several tons, had been insulated since winter by a deep covering of coal and dirt.

Are You Listening?

WONDER IF SHE'LL RAISE A HOWL IF I SCRAM RIGHT AFTER DINNER
THOUGHT
ALVIN ADONIS AND GLORIA GLAMOROUS WERE IN IT, AND THEY WERE SIMPLY—
I HAVEN'T SAT IN A POKER GAME FOR THREE WEEKS, AN' I'M RIPE FOR A LIL ACTION
THOUGHT
AND NOW THAT MAN CAN MAKE LOVE! MY!
I S'POSE THEY'LL PLAY DEUCES WILD AN' HIGH-LOW, BUT ON MY DEAL IT'LL BE STRAIGHT STUD—NOTHIN' WILD
THOUGHT
THEY HAD A SCENE IN A LOG CABIN IN THE MOUNTAINS. CAD MCSHARL, THE MAN WHO WANTS TO MARRY GLORIA, COMES IN AND—
THEY GOT TO ME AT TH' LAST SESSION, BUT I FEEL LUCKY TO-NIGHT
THOUGHT
ALVIN GIVES CAD THE MOST TERRIBLE THRASHING. HONESTLY IT WAS AWFUL
ALL I HOPE IS I CATCH OLD IVAN IN WHEN I HAVE ACES BACK TO BACK
THOUGHT
WHAT'S THAT? OH, TH' HAT. SURE, IT'S ALL RIGHT. LOOKS OKAY

Bob Burns

Says—

If I can't say somethin' nice about a person, I usually keep my mouth shut. Some folks, though, jest won't let you keep quiet. They keep fishin' for a compliment until a fella has'ta say somethin' to be polite. Did'ja ever get caught in a situation like that and say somethin' you thought was nice only to have it bounce back and skin your own knuckles?

For instance, my aunt was fishin' around and said to Uncle Slug "I'm pretty tired of hearin' you complain about my relations. Can't you think of anything nice to say about them?" Uncle Slug thought a minute and said "Well—yes, one thing . . . they were all opposed to our marriage."

INDEED! THANKS TO YOU, YOUR BROTHER, AND THEIR CHINESE BOYS!
WILL MISS CRAIL HAVE CHARGE OF NASTALTHIA'S UPBRINGING?
YES—SINCE MY WIFE'S DEATH DRUSILLA HAS BEEN LIKE A MOTHER TO THE CHILD....
... SHE CAME OUT FROM ENGLAND OF HER OWN VOLITION AFTER MRS. SMYTHE-HEATHERSTONE DIED! IT WAS MOST GENEROUS OF HER!
HOW VERY GENEROUS, INDEED!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — Wahoo Wins a Diving Contest—in Sunday's Post. — By Saunders and Woggon

GOOD WORK, COUNT RATSKI! WAHOO HAS MIXED US A CAULDRON OF THE MAGIC TONIC, KA-ZOWIE, YOU SAY?
YES, DICTATOR ZEERO! THIS WAHOO HAS ENOUGH FOR OUR CHEMISTS TO ANALYZE! WITH THAT SECRET OF GIANT STRENGTH, WE CAN BUILD A NATION OF SUPER-MEN!
AND—WAHOO?
THE PLANE I SUPPLY FOR HIM AND MINNIE-HA-CHA WILL HAVE A BOMB ATTACHED TO THE INSTRUMENT-BOARD CLOCK—
PRECISELY FIVE HOURS OUT TO SEA—POOF! BITS OF WRECKAGE WILL FLOAT ON THE OCEAN WAVES!
AN INSPIRED IDEA, COUNT!
INJUN TONIC ALL READY!
FINE! YOUR PLANE IS READY, TOO! I'M SURE YOU'LL HAVE A SHORT FLIGHT!

DONALD DUCK— — High Tide — By Walt Disney

WINNIE WINKLE — Winnie Takes Perry to the Beach—in Sunday's Post. — By Branner

THE NAGS ARE CATCHING UP TO WILL AT LAST!
YEAH! HE DROPPED TWO HUNDRED MORE YESTERDAY!
I TOLD THE GUY HE OUGHT TO QUIT WHILE HE WAS STILL AHEAD!
WELL, HE STILL HAS EIGHT HUNDRED DOLLARS LEFT!
YES, BUT THE MORE HE LOSES—THE MORE HE BETS! THAT'LL CONTINUE UNTIL HE LOSES ALL THAT HE'S WON!
IT'LL BE OKAY IF HE STOPS THERE—
—THEY USUALLY END UP OUTSIDE OF UNCLE BEN'S LENDING ESTABLISHMENT!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Moving Day — By Frank Martinek

WHAT?? ☆!33 THE NAVY DOCTORS HOLDING AN AUTOPSY ON ASPEN'S BODY?
I KNEW THAT FAKE DEATH CERTIFICATE WOULDN'T HOLD UP!
WE'VE GOT TO GET OUT OF THIS DUMP!—THE NAVAL INTELLIGENCE WILL BE ON OUR NECKS HERE ANY MINUTE—
WE'LL GO TO THE GHOUL—HE'LL HIDE US SOMEWHERE UNTIL—
LOCKED!!
YEAH—BUT I SAW A CURTAIN MOVE—THEY'RE IN THERE, SKIPPER!

MICKEY FINN — The Circus Wild Man Gets Loose—in Sunday's Post. — By Lank Leonard

AND MY UNCLE SAID ONE OF 'EM HAD A MUSTACHE AND WAS WEARIN' A WHITE PALM BEACH SUIT!
THAT'LL HELP US! AND A CAR WITH TWO MEN AND A LITTLE BOY SHOULD BE EASILY SPOTTED!
YOU THINK OF EVERY-THING, DON'TCHA?
YEAH—AND I JUST THOUGHT OF SUMPIN' ELSE—FROM HERE TO THE STATE LINE YOU AND THE KID ARE RIDIN' IN THE TRUNK IN BACK!
WATCH HIS HEAD!—AND SEE THAT HE DON'T YELL!
AND YOU SEE THAT WE DON'T HIT ANY BUMPS!
TWO MEN AND A LITTLE BOY?—OKAY!

Famous Football Coach.

THINK OF THE NATIONAL PUBLICITY FOR CARTER COLLEGE, JAKE!
BOY, WHAT I'LL DO WITH THIS ONE! TWO FOOTBALL STARS LOST FOR WEEKS AND FOUND AMONG INDIANS—GIGANTIC WELCOME—WOW!
HERE COMES HANNAH—AND SHE'S HOSTILE!
MRS. BRANT IS ASLEEP AND IT'S THE FIRST GOOD REST SHE'S HAD FOR WEEKS!
SORRY, MY LITTLE SWAN—WE WERE JUST MAKING PLANS TO WELCOME NED BRANT AND BUD SHEKELS
ONE MORE SOUND OUT OF YOU AND I'LL GRIND YOU TOGETHER LIKE HAMBURGER AND ONIONS!
AT YOUR COMMAND, ELEPHANT—I MEAN—ELEGANCE

YESSIR.
YOU WILL MEET MY FAMILY WON'T YOU? THEY'LL WANT TO TELL YOU THEIR GRATITUDE.
AWRIGHT. BUT PLEASE AST 'EM NOT T'MAKE A FUSS. I ONLY DONE WHAT I WAS ORDERED.
DON'T SAY THAT DEAR. OH I KNOW YOU DON'T MEAN IT. YOU'RE SO CUTE. YOU PRETEND YOU DON'T CARE—BUT A WOMAN KNOWS.
HUH—'SCUSE ME MISS BILLINGSLEY.
MR. PALOOKA—
OH DARN!
THE DOCTOR SAYS IT'S VITALLY IMPORTANT SIR. HE'S DANGEROUSLY ILL. IT—WELL IT MAY SAVE HIM.
